90 die in second Madrid crash in 10 days

From Our Own Correspond Madrid

About 90 people were killed yesterday when two Spanish airliners collided in thick fog in Madrid's second crash in less than two weeks. Airline officials said that there were 41 survivors.

A Boeing 727 of the national airline Iberia was taking off when a DC 9 of the domestic company Aviaco crossed its path on the main runway at Barajas airport. The DC 9's fuel tanks exploded and fire broke out.

Seifor Carlos Espinosa, president of both airlines, said all 37 passengers and five crew on board the Aviaco plane died. The Iberia aircraft was carrying 84 passengers, including about 40 Japanese tourists, and Señor Espinosa claimed the airport was open to traffic at the time and an official weather report put visibility at 300yds. The Iberia aircraft had been cleared for take-off by ground ontrol while the Aviaco plane had been told to start its takeoff approach.

37% rise in drink-drive prosecutions

By John Witherow

There has been a big increase in the number of prosecutions for drink-driving offences since the introduction of electronic breath-testing machines last May, according to provisional Home Office figures.

About 75,000 drivers were convicted on drink-drive charges last year. But in the seven momnths since the "intoximeters" came into use there have been 60,000 positive tests, most of which have led to convictions. If the trend continues it will mean that the number of convictions for drink-driving will increase by about 37 per cent over last year. An official of the manufacturers of Lion intoximeters. which have been issued to 39 police forces in England and Wales, said that the rate of positive results was highest because it enabled police officers to deal with drink-drive suspects much more rapidly than under the old system.

"Before, a policeman might have to go back to the police station for a couple of hours while he waited for a doctor and a blood test," he said. "Now he can be back on patrol within 10 minutes.

Home Office figures also show that last year only 35 per cent of tests for drink-driving proved positive, compared with nearly 60 per cent in the early leading to more prosecutions, but the printout from the £3,000 machine has led to legal controversy. Thousands of motorists fac-

The solicitor who challenged the printout in Basingstoke, Mr David Hawke, received 650 telephone calls in the week after the ruling. Most came from solicitors asking for the precise form of the defence and the firm has printed a letter explaining its case.

About 120 people, including a barrister, approached Mr Hawke asking him to defend them on drink-driving charges.

The Hungarian grandmaster Zoltan Ribli resigned the seventh game against Vassily Smyslov in the Acorn Computers World Championship semi-finals in London of Tuesday without resuming play.

This had been adjourned after Smyslov's forty-second move and Ribli sealed the move 42...Q-R8 ch. It was obvious, however, that Smyslov's king would soon escape the checks, after which Ribli's position was hopeless. His resignation made the score Smyslov 44, Ribli 24, This meant that the former world champion needed only two more points to win the match.

In the other semi-final Victor Korchnoi's stamina and resistance appear to be weakening. His loss of the sixth game was significant and his play in the seventh game on Tuesday confirmed this weakness. Kasparov opened with the Catalan System, as he had done on a number of occasions and Korchnoi adopted a simple, almost naive, way of meeting it, with the result that by move 15 Kasparov enjoyed a small but clear advantage with his King's bishop exerting much pressure along the long diagonal. On move 16 Kasparov made

Sir Peter Blaker (Blackpool South, C) said one objective should be closer consultation between the governments contributing to the multinational force. If Britain withdrew her force unilsterally, that would defeat that objective. Mrs Thatcher said Britain had no intention of withdrawing unilaterally. It was valued.

Mrs Thatcher said that she had got streets, that is not the police force.

We do (she said) need closer consultation with the United States. We meet frequently with our Enropean partners but not so curupean partiers out not so frequently with the united States, and this will be one value of the Nato and foreign ministers' meeting which will include Mr Schultz.

Ashley: Prepare for the break-up of Community

But the stakes are high for March and June in 1984, particularly when there is increasing distrust across the Atlantic. If the Community were to begin to disintegrate, the dangers in terms of money and security and Europe could far exceed even the issues discussed at Athens.

She also agreed on the necessity for more cooperation on high technology. Europe had lost out to the Japanese and the United States here, though the EEC was a larger market and as wealthy as the US and much larger than Japan. She would like some room made from the agriculture budget to get more industrial cooperation and esprit. Will he tell us that under present circumstances there is no prospect of Parliament being to asked to increase the levies paid by the British people to finance agriculture expenditure which the Community, all too self-evidently, has no intention of reforming. Sir Geoffrey Howe: Of course the conclusions of the summit are disappointing to the Government, and should be to all of us, because it is crucially important that the Community should resolve these questions.

He is wrong to say that the Government failed to establish its position. It was crystal clear. We want the Community to resolve these matters.

That is one of the reasons why our stand is directed to secure effective control of the growth of agricultural expenditure and a proper regime within the Community to tackle precisely problems of that kind. Mr Edward Taylor (Southend East, C): Most of us would accept that the Government has done a great service by making it clear it believed CAP expenditure should be con-tained and controlled. But there are quite a number of us who have listened to the debate and all the statements and still have not the slightest idea of how precisely the Government think that containing or restraining should actually be done. Sir Geoffrey Howe: The essence of the approach is that there must be a proper limit on the size of expenditure on agriculture policy accompanied by effective controls. Mr Robin Cook, chief Opposition spokesman: If this Government is so committed to effective control over agriculture, why is the Chancellor budgeting for a 15 per cent increase in expenditure on agriculture intervention?

Sir Geoffrey Howe: There is no conclusion on what the outcome of these negotiations will be. He appealed to those who under-standably felt a sense of outrage to realize that measures of retaliation and escalation of violence would only reward the murderers with the objective they had set out to achieve.

Christmas card bonanza

Season's greetings 1,300 million times

A record 1,300 million dozen for every British man, woman and child, are likely to be posted this year, the greeting card industry's trade association said yesterday. Charities are aiming to capture a quarter of the market.

Last year, 1,160 million Christmas cards were sold at a cost of £80m. Of those, 240 million were charity cards, which raised £30m.

The charities' share of the market is expected to increase by between 10 and 30 per cent this year, largely because of more professional marketing techniques. Where once cards were sold in small shops or from catalogues pasted with samoles, the public is now inundated with glossy colour cata-logues, mail order brochures and billboards that are the climax of a year's campaign. The Imperial Cancer Re-search Fund believes its estimated £900,000 turnover of cards and gifts this year is because of a more aggressive public relations campaign that has included gift sales and publicity about its research. Charities are also making use of mass mailing lists and computerized record-keeping and are seeking advice from advertising agencies.

Christmas cards account for lmost two-thirds of card sales. but only a third of all greeting

The average Christmas card; Christmas cards, almost two now costs 7p, although these sold for charity are asually more expensive. The profit margin on all greeting cards averages 40 per cent.

The prediction of record sales this year comes from the Greeting Card and Calendar Association, which can offer a wealth of interesting facts, as well as sales figures.

For example, it reports that the Prime Minister sends about 2,000 Christmas cards each year, while President Reagan signs" nearly 60,000.

The tiniest Christmas care was allegedly inscribed on a grain of rice and sent to the Prince of Wales in 1929, while the most valuable must have been that sent by the Gaekwar of Baroda to an Englishwoman of his affections.

Made of ivory and decorated with 44 diamonds, the card took six months to make and was said to be worth £500,000 eighty years ago.

The first Christmas card, according to the association, was devised by Sir Henry Cole in 1843 because he forgotten to send the traditional Christmas letter to his friends. Mechanically printed, hand-tinted, cards struck him as a reasonable last-minute substitute; the left-over cards were sold in Old Bond Street at a shilling a time, and the rest is

Charities told to shun politics

Voluntary organizations should keep out of politics and resist government interference the National Council for Voluntary Organizations has told its 360 members.

The council says there has been a 63 per cent increase in government grants to charities and voluntary organizations in recent years but it has been accompanied by more complaints about increasing govern-ment pressure on their work.

Guidance issued by the council says organizations should not attempt to influence the electoral process but should assert and exercise their freedom to advocate changes or continuity in public policy, programmes and law".

Reith lecturer boosts open government lobby By Peter Hennessy

Permanent Secretary to the Treasury, came out in favour of open government last night with a fervour that could only embarrass the Prime Minister and Sir Robert Armstrong, Secretary of the Cabinet, with whom he served as Joint Head of the Home Civil Service until last Easter.

In the course of the 1983 BBC Reith lectures, Sir Douglas floated the idea of an external audit on open government which would monitor ministers' fulfilment of pledges to be more forthcoming with Parliament and the public.

The system would need an audit staff with full access to official files. The auditors would be empowered to alert Parliament in cases of unjustified supression.

Ministers could be forced to defend their decisions to withhold information in closed session before a Commons select committee. Such a system would be costly to operate but

From Mario Modiane

The first of four Greek ships chartered to evacuate the 4,000 Palestinians loyal to Mr Yassir Arafat, is due to reach the port. of Tripoli tomorrow.

The Greek Government responded to a request from the PLO leader for help. The Greek Ministry of Merchant Marine made the arrangements and the four ships will take the Palestinians to North Yemen and Tunisia.

"The ships will fly the flags of Greece and the United Nations, as the whole operation will be under the supervision of the U.N. Secretary-General," a spokesman said.

The contracts were signed yesterday between the Greek shipowners and representatives of the PLO, which will bear the cost, including a two per cent war-risk levy. • JERUSALEM: Pressure

In an interview in Paris, broadcast by Israel Radio, Mr Ariel Sharon, the former Defence Minister, who is now Minister without Portfolio, claimed that it would be a grave mistake for the Israelis to allow Mr Arafat to leave Lebanon, the cost of which would be the revival of the PLO.

Mr Sharon's demand, reflected the anger felt after Tuesday's explosion which killed four Israelis, including two children, aged 11 and 4 and an elderly man of 77. Ten of the 30 civilians still hospitalized were in a serious condition last night and one was described

Bonn bans neo-Nazis

After dawn raids throughout West Germany on the homes of 70 known neo-Nazis, Herr Friedrich Zimmerman, the Interior Minister banned the most active neo-Nazi organization and associated right-wing groups, which he said posed a langer to democracy.

In a carefully coordinated action, police in nine federal states searched the homes of leading members of the Action Front of National Socialists/National Activists. No arrests were made but police took away cards, letters, material Nazi emblems and swastikas.

The Action Front is estimated to have 270 members, mainly young people, organized into 32 local "comradeships." It is led by Herr Michael Kühen a former soldier who was released last year after four years in a Hamburg prison for advocating racial hatred. Ten days ago he was arrested in Vienna for Nazi activities and expelled

Herr Zimmermann called the Front the most active of the neo-Nazi groups in the federal Republic, and said he would not stand idly by while it carried out anti-democratic actions. This year alone, neo-Nazis are accused of 52 acts of violence, including arson attacks, muggings, bodily harm and damage to property. The Interior Ministry said it kenw of 1,400 neo-Nazis altogether in the country, including 300 militants. The total has risen by 100 over last year.

Neo-Nazi violence has been directed mainly against foreigners, especially Turks, and the authorities have been concerned at the spread of right-wing extremism among football fans. Among the actions planned by the Action Front were gatherings in Munich to commemorate the sixtieth anniversary of Hitler's abortive 1923 putsch and the forty-fifth anniversary

Peking hint on intervention

Peking (Reuter, AP) - British and Chinese negotiators met here vesterday for a fresh round of formal talks on Hongkong's future to the background of a warning that China might change its 1997 deadline and an announcement of a joint Anglo-Chinese agreement to build a

Traumatic memory set in granite

It looks, judging by the artist's impression, like a vast furled-up flag swirling into the sky. Set in parkland on a hill above one of Moscow's main arterial roads, the red granite Victory Monument will dominate a memorial complex containing a "Museum of the Great Patriotic War", white marble pillars with the names of heroes etched in gold, military busts and "threedimensional battle scenes".

When it is finished (work has already started), millions of visitors will come in coachloads from factories and schools to listen to guides and look at the exhibitions. Yet apart from the dwindling numbers of ex-soldiers and airmen, very few of the visitors will remember what the monument project com-menorates - the Second World

Foreigners in Moscow are often struck by the way the war is still recalled as if it happened yesterday. Westerners, especially those under 40, tend to regard the war as ancient history, the subject matter of grainy newsreels and dusty tomes. It belongs to another age. For Russians it is a living memory. Wartime memories are kept alive artificially by the regime: they dominate Soviet films and books, and you cannot seem to turn on the television without seeing a group of bemedalled veterans reliving their battles. The war provides the Kremlin with a convenient theme for reinforcing national unity and the need for strong defences at the expense of justifies the suppression of deviant views as traitorous or

On the other hand, for many Russians the war against Hitler, which claimed 20 million Soviet lives (a figure much repeated), is a trauma which needs no artificial respiration to keep it alive.

The Young Pioneers who stand guard by the eternal flame in cities all over Russia are left in no doubt that their parents or grand parents endured terrible suffering which must not be repeated.

There are some Muscovites, though, who can be heard to mutter that the Victory Monument is a colossal waste of meagre public resources, and that the victims of fascism are already commemorated else-where in simpler but no less striking monuments. One of the most telling is the series of huge, rust-coloured crossed metal bars - like gigantic antitank barricades - by the side of the Moscow to Leningrad highway, not far from Moscow airport. They mark the fur-thest point reached by Nazi tanks in 1941, proving that to entering Moscow they could have caught a bus into town, had there been any buses running.

Still, literary-minded Russians point out that Tolstoy erected his monument to the 1812 war against Napoleon half a century after the war had ended, yet nobody thought War and Peace old bat. The comparison is apt, since the new Victory Monument is to rise on a hill above Kutuzovsky Prospekt, where there are already several reminders of the earlier Russian struggle against foreign invaders.

Known ironically as "Welcome Hill", it guards the approach to Moscow from

The coach parties will no doubt pause at these memorials to the patriotic war of 1812 before going up the hill to consider the Great Patriotic War of 1941 and the new Victory Monument. Justice Fox and Lord Justice Kerr [Judgment delivered December 6] For an asset to be acquired "as trading stock" within the meaning of section 274(1) of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970 the purpose of the acquisition must be commercial in character.

The Court of Appeal so held when considering two appeals involving claims by taxpayer companies to avail themselves of provisions in the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970 and the Finance Act 1965 enabling groups of companies to convert a capital loss into a revenue loss for corporation tax purposes.

Where the sole purpose of the acquisition of an asser by the tax payer company was to obtain a fiscal advantage for the group of companies of which it was a member, the Court of Appeal held that the asset was not acquired "as trading stock" and allowed an appeal by the Crown from the dismissal by Mr Justice Goulding (The Times March 25, 1982) of the Crown's appeal against a determination of the general commissioners to discharge an assessment to to discharge an assessment to corporation tax on Arndale Properties Ltd in a sum of £28,072 for the year ending March 31, 1974.

The court (Lord Justice Lawton dissenting) dismissed the Crown's appeal from the decision of Mr Justice Walton (The Times August 6, 1982) who upheld a determi-nation of the general commissioners to discharge an assessment to corporation tax on Nova Securities Lid for its accounting period to December 1973.

Leave to appeal to the House of Lords was granted in both cases.

Mr Jonathan Parker, QC and Mr John Mummery for the Crown in the first appeal; Mr Andrew Park, QC and Mr Michael Flesch, QC for Arndale Properties Ltd; Mr J. E. Holroyd Pearce, QC and Mr Peter Goldsmith for the Crown in the second appeal; Mr C. N. Beattie, QC Securities Ltd.

LORD JUSTICE LAWTON said that in each appeal the principal issue was whether the company taxpayer, being a member of a group of companies, had acquired "an asset as trading stock" within the meaning of section 274(1) of the income and Corporation Taxes Act 1970. If they had, they could bring into account as trading losses capital losses which had been sustained by the member of the group from whom they had acquired the assets.

In both cases the asset acquired was of the kind in which the taxpayer company traded. But that did not mean that it had been acquired "as trading stock". It must have been acquired for the purpose of being used in the course of trade.

In his Lordship's judgment, if the acquisition of an asset lacked a commercial character it could not be said to have been acquired as trading stock; but if it had that character the reason why the acquisition was made, in the absence of other factors, ought not to deprive it of that character.

Whether a transaction had a commercial character was a question of mixed fact and law. It was a question of law what the words "acquires an asset as trading stock" in section 274(1) meant and a question of fact whether the transaction having a commercial character and, on the facts found, the commissioners could reasonably have adjudged that it had such character, they could not be said to have made a determination which was operous in law and their

هكذا من الأصل

On March 30, 1973, SPI transferred the property to the taxpaver for a consideration shown by book entries as £3,090,000. By another assignment on the same day the taxpayer transferred the pro-perty to a third subsidiary Aradale Property Trust Ltd (Arndale), an company, made between members of a group of companies, section 273(1) of the 1970 Act applied so that the transfer was deemed to have produced neither a gain nor a loss to SPI and the taxpayer was deemed to have acquired the property at a price of £5.313,822.

The property was not part of The property was not part of SPI's trading stock. It was one of its capital assets. Land and buildings, however, were assets with which the taxpayer traded.

If it did acquire the property as trading stock and section 274(1) applied, under paragraph 1 of Schedule 7 to the Finance Act 1965, the taxnayer's appropriation to its the taxnayer's appropriation to its schedule / to the rinance act 1903, the taxpayer's appropriation to its trading stock would be made at the property's market value of £3,100,000, and the difference of the deemed consideration under section 273(1) could be treated as a trading loss following an election under paragraph 1(3) which was made in December 1975.

The commissioners decided that the taxpayer had acquired that the taxpayer had acquired the property "as trading stock", even though those responsible for overall group policy had decided that the property should be sold to the taxpayer and immediately resold to Arndale solely in order that the group should obtain a fiscal advantage in the form of tax relief for the large and genuine loss which

In his Lordship's judgment, the commissioners could not have directed themselves properly as to the relevant law. They should have looked at the transaction as a whole and should not have confined themselves to the legal effect of the

The transactions did not bear the badges of trade. Within the group there was no commercial reason why SPI should not have assigned directly to Arndale. No cash passed £10,000 could not have been much of an incentive because on its face no provision had been made for profit.

The assignment through th taxpayer could only have been made for the purpose of getting a fiscal benefit. The property could not have been acquired "as trading stock". When deciding otherwise the commissioners made a determi nation which was erroneous in point of law.

The judge had considered himself bound to uphold the determination because of Griffiths v J. P. Harrison (Waiford) Ltd ([1963] AC 1). Assuming, as one must, that the judgment in that case as to the construction of section 341(1) of the Income Tax Act 1952 was binding on the court, his Lordship distinguished the present appeal on the ground that it was concerned with section 274(1) of the 1970 Act. In the second appeal, the taxpayer company bought and sold quoted securities in a small way over a number of years. In March 1973 the whole of its issue share capital was acquired by a company from the Littlewoods group. The acquiring company had previously undertaken a commercial venture in Western Germany through a subsidiary, Medaillon Mode GmbH, which had been financially disastrous. Its only chance of recouping any losses lay in the value of Medaillon's premises in Offenbach.

Uncorroborated evidence of mental patients

Regina v Bagshaw, and Others Before Lord Justice O'Connor, Mr Justice Kilner Brown and Mr Justice Popplewell [Judgment delivered December 2]

The Court of Appeal (Criminal Division) certified that a point of law of general public importance was involved in the question whether in a case where the evidence for the Crown was solely that of a witness who was not in one of the accepted categories of suspect witnesses, but who by reason of his particular mental condition and criminal convictions fulfilled the same criteria, the judge must warn the jury that it was dangerous to convict on his uncorroborated evidence. Mr Christopher Wilson-Smith and Mr Robin Tolson for the appellant; Mr Julian Baughan and Mr J. M. D. Chapple for the Crown.

JUSTICE KILNER BROWN, delivering the judgment of the court, said that the substantive fraud alleged was an intention to obtain money from an insurance company by a false representation that a lorry load of scallops had been stolen while in transit, which would be contrary to section 15 of the Theft Act 1968. It had been submitted that the indictment should have been laid as a conspiracy to obtain property by deception contrary to section [f1] of the 1977 Act, and not as a conspiracy to defraud contrary to common law.

The application of sections 1(1) and 5(1) and (2) had given rise to much discussion, to difference of opinion between divisions of the Court of Appeal and uncertainty in courts of first instance. The wording of section 5(1) and (2) appeared in effect to preserve the whole range of common law conspiracy to defraud, which included a wide variety of offences which were created and defined by statute and were no leaser common law offences.

defined by statute and were no longer common-law offences.

In R v Quinn ((1978) Crim L R 750) Mr Justice Drake ruled that a conspiracy to steal should be charged at common law. In R r
Walters ((1979) 69 Cr App R 115)
Lord Widgery, Lord Chief Justice held that it was proport to record a held that it was proper to regard a within a conspiracy to defraud, and that an indictment was not rendered invalid merely because it charged conspiracy to defraud if truly the offence was conspiracy to steal.

Then in R v Duncalf ([1979] WLR 918) the Court of Appeal held, disapproving Quinn, that upon the true construction of section 5(2) the only common-law offence that was preserved was a conspiracy to defraud simpliciter, and that where the obvious purpose of the conspiracy was to steal the Act required it to be charged as such contrary to section 1.

As a result of the guidence given the practice had developed of framing indictments and con-spiracies to rob and conspiracies to steal and so forth rather than alleging a conspiracy to defraud, and alleging a conspiracy to defraud in those cases where fraud was the essence of the offence,

The convenience of that practice the draughtsman plainly envisaged that a conspiracy to defined might also be a conspiracy as defined by section 1(1), and so provided in

Their Lordships doubted whether the decisions in Duncali and Walters could stand together. On the clear wording of section 5(2) they were content to be bound by the decision in Walters and to hold that the appellant was properly charged with conspiracy to defraud.

The submission that the indictment was defective was rejected. Their Lordships, however, wished to remind those who persisted in raising questions on the form of the indictment that the arguments were of little practical importance. Even if an indictment was incorrectly framed, it was defective only and did not render the trial a nullity: see R v Molyneux ((1980) 72 Cr App R 111) and R v McLaughlin ((1982) 76 Cr App R 42).

Mr Justice Neill so stated in the Commercial Court of the Queen's Bench Division on November 30.

For a Rolex Oyster, flying round the world is just a routine job.

After nearly 60 hours without sleep, flying at 17,000 feet over India, Judith Chisholm began to hallucinate. Faces of relatives and friends began to appear around her in the cockpit.

But even then, with her physical and mental reserves virtually exhausted, Judith Chisholm was determined to continue her record breaking round-the-world flight and fly on to Sri Lanka.

"I had the option of landing in India," she says, "but I couldn't take the risk of being delayed."

Later in the flight Judith found herself flying through a tropical storm of terrifying intensity during which the plane was struck by lightning.

"In all my years of flying, I've never been so frightened," she says.

And then, within four hours of Australia, a fault in the fuel transfer system nearly forced her down into the ocean.

On reaching Sydney, Judith decided she was capable of flying on. And when she finally

During those 15 days she had slept for less than 40 hours.

Little wonder then to hear Judith describe her regular occupation of flying executive jets around Europe as "just a routine job."

For Judith Chisholm, part of the routine of any flight is a Rolex Oyster.

"On a normal flight, having a totally reliable watch is essential," she says. "To attempt to fly round the world without one would be absolute madness. A Rolex Oyster is that totally reliable watch. Unlike me, it was wide awake for every second of those 360 hours."

It is reassuring to know that every Rolex Oyster Chronometer is constructed to withstand a flight like Judith Chisholm's.

trum. Yet there are revealing similarities between them, in content if not in form. Neither Ernest Bevin nor Lord Carrington - due to be named tomorrow as the next Secretary-General of Nato - went to university, though both were men of powerful, natural and energetic intelligence. Both had extensive experience of the world outside politics; and neither mixed ideology with foreign affairs. The parallel should not be strained but it highlights the cross-party pragmatism that has, until very recently, characterized the British approach to foreign policy. In Carrington's case, this took the form of a coruscating common sense which was the root of his enormous popularity with the British

Most biographies linger more on the style than the substance of the man: the overtones of Whiggery, Waugh and Wodehouse; Eton, the Guards, the manor house and the acres in Buckinghamshire; and the apparent effortlessness of everything, whether the rise to power, the humour or the

His periods in office - at extremes of the social spec-trum. Yet there are revealing and Defence before the Foreign Office - have also been interspersed with active involvement in business and banking, and relentless travel. At the Foreign Office, this busyness reached a peak. Initially, there was as much to learn as to do, especially about Europe. MCAs (the notoriously intricate system of Monetary Compensation Amounts paid under the agricultural policy) and the Green Pound had not existed during his earlier days in the ministry of Agriculture. Carrington is not a natural economist - though he is not a matchstick man either - and he had to swot up the whole subject at the same time as he was laying the diplomatic foundations of Lancaster House. His solution was to get up at five and do a couple of hours hard work on his box before breakfast.

The inner rigour could be seen in other ways. Behind the bonhomie and the banter, there is a sharp and even merciless critic. It came out in small ways. Each ambassador thought he was Carrington's favourite. Each had his weak point too, which Carrington There is a shade of affectionate, spotted at first meeting. historical moment to secure a national consensus for the necessity of Nato; so Carrington was best placed in the House of Lords to take the hair-raising political risks of Lancaster House. The Rhodesian settlement was pushed through by a mixture of bluff, willpower and sheer diplomatic professionalism, with his friend lan Gilmour keeping the anxious Commons involved.

Carrington knew all along that he was on the high wire, and naturally resented the prodding in the press and the intrigues by some of his own party to dislodge him – just as he could never forgive Nyerere's attempts to wreck the conference. He still has no regrets at having stopped an unwinnable war in which 25,000 people, including many whites, had already died, and at having staged one of the most democratic elections ever likely to be seen in Africa. He is genuinely unable to understand the opponents of the settlement. He himself is a fierce opponent of the illusion of options - in this case letting the war go on, backing the fragile Bishop Muzorewa, or both,

He was equally persistent in the search for diplomatic solutions in Gibraltar, Belize, Hongkong and the Falklands. In this sense, he was very much in tune with the new Thatcher goes back to the time when he was Africa. Just as Bevin, the trade of complacency and inertia. Ever unionist, was the right man at the right conscious of the danger of letting these sensitive situations fester, he once threw a fit when a national newspaper suggested that he should learn to "leave well alone". He was conscious too of the enormity of the problems Britain faced closer to the centre of her concerns - in Europe, the Middle East, East/West relations and the Atlantic relationship.

> What had been an advantage over Rhodesia turned out to be a drawback in the Falklands. Stiff, formal and infrequent sessions with the select committee on Foreign Affairs and meetings with backbenchers could not substitute for direct involvement in the House of Commons. Maybe the crucial point in Carrington's career was his decision not to promote leaseback in the Falklands after the Commons said 'no". His defence is the difficulty of doing so without signalling weakness to the Argentinians, and that it is all really hindsight anyway. It is the only real point on which the Franks Report: sought to fault him.

nly after the Rhodesian incubus was lifted was there time to devote to the central issues. Here, his activism was balanced by an inbred times, with their emphasis on the evils 'scepticism: some of his officials would have preferred Britain to take a higher profile in the Middle East, for example. Carrington (who had a way of making them think he was taking their advice, but doing something rather different) worked hard to secure the Venice Declaration, and at follow-up contacts. with individual Arab governments. But his short-term concern was not to pull off another diplomatic coup, but to contain the combustible uncer-tainties of the Middle East during the American electoral campaign, at a time when Carter's Camp David was manifestly failing; and to get what he saw as the simple, balanced principles of the declaration firmly established.

> He has always been an unashamed believer in diplomacy. But he believes strongly in defence too. He never questioned the need for cruise or Trident, though he enjoyed stirring up waves in Whitehall by repeating at the drop of a brass hat his belief that Britain would eventually have to choose between a first class navy, army and air force.

He was unquestioning too about Europe. At the slightest manifestation of anti-Europeanism he would launch into a well-rehearsed, but perfectly sincere, speech about his post-war reflections as he "stood in the ruins of Cologne".

It is sometimes said that Carrington, as foreign secretary, travelled too much, and lost touch with political realities at home. Seen in a different perspective, this international activism had a broader purpose and effect. By flying the flag with such flair, he helped to reassure opinion abroad while some heavy domestic furniture was being moved around. By keeping Britain's end up, he helped the government's overall popularity at a time when there seemed little prospect of an economic Lancaster House.

The key relationship was, of course, with Mrs Thatcher. They saw each other far more often - almost daily than is usual between prime minister and foreign secretary. There were, inevitably, difficulties. But there was real mutual respect as well, and any tensions were remarkably creative As a non-contender for the throne, Carrington used his political detachment to argue forcefully for what he thought was right. They brought out the best in each other: she helping to root him in stern principle; and he acting as a catalyst between the Prime Minister's instincts and intelligence.

There was never any rancour and much mutual solicitude. Once, late on a Saturday afternoon after a tense day on the Rhodesian tightrope, he arrived pale, drawn and lunchless at Number 10. The Prime Minister suddenly realized that he had not eaten, and offered to cook him scrambled eggs in her flat upstairs. The chemistry between them was sometimes volatile, but mostly highly effective.

The Prime Minister supported his Nato candidacy, though Carrington himself has hardly gone out of his way to solicit the job. His famous "megaphone diplomacy" speech at the International Institute of Strategic Studies last April (in fact he deliberately omitted these particular words, which he thought might be misunderstood at Number 10, from the spoken text but they were in the press release...) was hardly calculated to Washington's eyes.

Yet Carrington is a natural choice for Nato at a time when the effectiveness of defence through deterrence will become increasingly closely linked to the diplomacy of arms control. It is difficult to think of anyone better suited to "sell" Nato's strategy to the western public, and to reconcile transatlantic interests, after the bruising period of the Euro-missiles deployment, than a former British minister of both defence and foreign affairs with his reputation.

In a sense he is an unlikely international civil servant. Mrs Thatcher said on his resignation that he had been a "sturdy and bonny fighter for Britain". He will still be fighting for Britain, as well as for Nato in Brussels. His appointment will help to raise Britain's profile and prestige in the whole costly, complex area of security, arms control and East/West

And there is a curious continuity in the fact that Carrington, the aristocrat, should be secretary-general of an organisation in the establishment of which his distinguished, proletarian predecessor as foreign secretary had such a big hand.

Unsung hero of those noises off

People who do very unusual jobs indeed 17: The MP who sits nearest to the microphone on the Commons and goes "Yah! Yah!"

Whenever we hear a recording of the proceedings in the House of Commons, we can hear behind the speaker a chorus of reaction from MPs, ranging from a quiet rhubarb to a rabble riot. But no matter how loud the chorus one voice always seems closer than the others. It belongs to Quentin Huckleby, SDP-Labour member for Crossover South.

"Like all great Parliamentary customs, it started by accident," says Quentin, an affable self-employed conveyancer of about 45. "I just happened to be sitting nearest the mike one day during a particularly boring debate on the renaming of the North Sea, and I was passed a note by the Speaker. Please provide some reactions? it said, 'or the radio audience will think there's no one here.' Well, I could see what he meant, so I started harrumphing and groaning a bit, as we normally would do if Mrs Thatcher was speaking. "Anyway, the Speaker came up to me afterwards and said I was a great success and could I go on doing it in future debates, so I always have. What he liked especially, I think, was that he couldn't tell from the noises I was making whether I supported the speaker or not. Of course, as a Labour-SDP member I often don't know myself, so I suppose I have without realizing evolved some non-committal but impassioned noises. I now have a special seat near the mike."

Ouentin Huckleby has not actually spoken in the house since winning his seat it the Election, but as he has grunted and groaned non-stop through every debate, he doesn't think he has to.

"People outside the Commons often think it's rude of me to interrupt and barrack speakers but they don't realize that the speakers love it. Mrs Thatcher raising her voice to soar over the rebellious crowd beneath her - well, she's be lost if she didn't have that hubbub to fight. She'd certainly sound pretty stupid if she were shouting in a complete silence. When there's not enough noise, she actually signals to me to start the protest going."

How does he get that distinctive "Yahyah" noise that only MPs seem capable of? "It's not really 'Yah-yah' if you listen closely. It's more like 'Hear hear' recorded at 45 rpm and then played back at 33 rpm. improve his chances of appointment in It's got overtones of approval and disapproval at the same time. The same with what the press calls cries of 'Oh! Oh! Oh!'. This is really 'Ho ho ho' slowed down and played back with more bass. And a touch of echo."

Wouldn't Mr Huckleby admit that the Parliamentary chorus is rather like a secondary school class barracking a weak

Isn't this all rather childish? "Oh, definitely. That's why the public loves it. I know the critics say we sound charabane, but let's face it: that's what people identify with. Of course, as the prime mover I have to do a lot of rehearsing."

Rehearsing? How can you rehearse crowd reactions? "Easily. Sometimes I practise as a

The only time I got really angry was when I noticed Mrs Thatcher edging near the microphone during a Neil Kinnock explosion, and booing into it, rather like herself at half speed. With your help, Nicola will be able to write a thank you letter this Christmas.

Nicola is one of the children who lives at Craig-Y-Parc, our school near Cardiff.

Oxygen starvation to her brain at birth means that she can neither walk, talk nor properly co-ordinate her hands.

Yet she is an intelligent girl and with the aid of elementary computers she is learning how to express herself more easily.

To carry on this work, we need your donation.

The money is required for all our schools, our day and residential centres, social services, industrial units and research.

To say nothing of the time and skill of the therapists and teachers who look after children like Nicola. No-one can ever give her the gift of

Nato's man in the middle

Nato, as the most senior official of the biggest and most powerful security alliance in the world, has immense prestige but, in reality, very little power. He is an international civil servant appointed by the organization's highest body, the North Atlantic

Council, which consists of the representative ministers from each member country. He becomes chairman of this council, the Defence Planning Committee, and the Nuclear Planning Group, in their meetings at ministerial level - normally twice a year - and in their regular and informal meetings at permanent representatives' level -- iornially twice a week. There he can exert considerable influence but all decisions are made by the delegates and, as the organization has no supra national character, they kave to be unanim It is from this apparent

I thought the Greenpeace people were barmy before I saw this book. Now I know they are. No more Porter shows - such as Jubilee, Red Hot and Blue, and Leave It To Me - came to London in that decade, though some of their songs did; but during the War there was a rash of them: Dubarry Was a Lady with Frances Day and Arthur Riscoe, Panama Hattie with Bebe Daniels, Something For The Boys with Evelyn Dall, Let's Face It with Bobby Howes and Pat Kirkwood. The last did quite well, but the other three, which had all starred Merman in New York, failed to make much impact. But at the beginning of the 50s there arrived what many consider his masterpiece. Kiss Me. Kate. in which almost every song was perfection in itself and a perfect complement to the libretto. I say "almost" because Porter's wit, so scintillating in the 30s, became a little tarnished in the Shakespeare ("Kick her right in the Coriolanus"), downright

It is a measure of the sophistication of Broadway audiences at that time and of the intimacy of Manhattan that almost everyone knew who and what he was

> This huge volume contains every single one of Cole Porter's lyrics, from his student days to his death, including many never used or cut from shows. It also has a foreword by John Updike and some attractive photographs (and two wrong captions: on p.138 "Virginia Bruce" should be "Una Merkel" and on p.220 "Janet Blair" should be "Cobina Wright Jr") but at £25 is hardly a snip. However, for Broadwa buffs it could be a useful corrective to the often misinformed drivel one hears on the radio (usually on Sunday afternoons).

Porter recorded a few of his - and extremely camp he sounds! There's no one to touch either of them today, I'm afraid; in the field of lyricwriting "Anything", it seems - and the less one can

Coming to terms with the evil eye

The Commons are dithering on the brink of television. Resistance looks dated and lastditch. Yet we will still have to be pushed into our final decision. That push into the twentieth century could well be adminis-tered by a bastion of the nineteenth, the House of Lords.

Instead of concentrating on the realities of our role and how it can be made relevant to a modern society in which people get most of their news and information from television, the argument in Parliament has been dominated by prejudice and fear. Most MPs still like to see the chamber as a forum for persuasion by deliberation. In fact, of course, we have government by party, the verdict pre-ordained. Yet the party battle can have no din, its stage no audience, unless both reach the public. At the moment they clearly do not. On this rational basis. there is no real argument against television. We use it or Parliament continues to decline in reliance, respect and public standing.

. Television has the audience whose attention the politicians seek. Unable to cover parliamentary politics in any mediagenic way, it has been forced to stage its own political circuses with Sir Robin and Alistair and others as ring masters. We now view the results with a mixture of fear and envy, eager to appear but always ready to cry foul.

Parliament deals with eternal verities; television sensationalizes, trivializes, dilutes with entertainment. In short, it distorts. But the other fear is contradictory. We also worry that television will show Parliament's reality, the vast acres of empty benches, MPs sleeping, gossiping, picking their noses,

As the House of Lords prepares to debate the television of its proceedings, Austin Mitchell MP urges his colleagues in both houses to take the last steps towards admitting the cameras or alternatively shouting, screaming, hounding Mrs Thatcher and generally re-enacting feeding time at Whipsnade.

The arguments against admitting the cameras are as strong, as prejudiced and as irrelevant as ever, but the Commons have now voted, albeit by a small majority, in favour of the principle.

Younger MPs are less deferential to encrusted tradition; public opinion is in favour and most other legislatures have shown the way. Finally, cable is coming, with it the ability to do what radio should be doing; providing continuous coverage of the kind that those interested can tune into and drop out of as they wish.

This is the importance of the Lords' vote. Because television confers importance on anything it covers - indeed many people assume that nothing can be important unless covered by television - televising the Lords would threaten the Commons', primacy. More important, though, the Lords can show that television can improve and not demean, that serious discussion of serious issues does occur.

It's a shame that the raw material, their lordships, is not as good as we can offer. Yet their experience will allow fears to vanish like mists before the rising sun. Soon we will all be wondering why we never had television before. What took us so long?

Which leaves only the technical problem of what kind of coverage. My own Bills have been based on introducing the Canadian system: coverage by unobtrusive, wallmounted cameras, neutral mid-shots of the Member speaking with no cutaways or reaction shots, the whole controlled by the Commons itself, just as Hansard is. This makes for duller television - the broadcasting organizations are not happy with it - but I opted for it because it makes introduction

Unfortunately, such coverage is expensive: installation in the USA cost $1.2m. The television channels can be asked contribute but the costs must come from the public purse, which is hardly an attractive proposal for a government like the present. The Lords, being bolder spirits, may well opt for the alternative, which is to hand themselves over to the TV organizations.

The Government could opt for a compromise: outside money, ultimate control inside. These considerations are tactical and technical. The reality is that we stand on the brink of change. The Government should take us there.

Land of myth and missile: Roger Boyes reports from East Germany

Behind the wire, a chill wind

War and peace, hell and heaven: visions of the apocalypse crowd the thickset woodland of Thuringia, with its witches and its imps, its T-72 tanks and sparkling new missiles. This is the front line of the Warsaw Pact and the nervousness of the East Germans is everywhere in evidence. In the air there is Kriegsstimmung, war-mood, though the official talk is of peace, of special peace shifts in the factories, of concerts for peace, of peace film

Soviet soldiers are ubiquitous: political officers with relatively long hair and bulging briefcases read Izvestia on the commuter trains, callow conscripts from Kirghizia, barely able to speak Russian and bewildered by the Germans, thrust a movement order at a passer-by, hoping for directions they can understand. The smell of their damp snow-sodden gaberdine mingles with the scents of Christmas, the pine and the candles.

Hell, we know from Thuringian mythology, is in East Germany. The story goes that a pious English accounts) named Reinswig was informed that her husband, recently dead, could be heard howling and screaming in hell's torment from deep within a cave in the village of Sacttlestaett. At the entrance of hell, she set up a chapel to administer to the damned and for a while the soul of her husband was at peace.

Nowadays in Saettlestaett the images of hell and the loud gnashing. of teeth come from the television Germany - the notable exception is Dresden - can pick up West German television and there was scarcely a family in the state that did not follow the recent parliamentary debates in Bonn on the stationing of cruise and Pershings. For once the Schwarze Kanal - the Black Channel - did not undermine the East German propaganda machine, but rather supported it, fed the new myths of Thuringia to the East German viewer.

It seemed as if devil-in-the-flesh Reagan, assisted ably by his apprentice Helmut Kohl, had trampled on public opinion and imposed a new tension on East-West relations that would above all hurt the East Germans. ("Do you think this is going to make it any easier for us to travel to the West? It's a mistake, a blunder": thus a young teenager who in the West would clearly have been a Green.)

The Bundestag vote, poached from the television screens, had two other effects on the public mood: it made it easier for those whose official role is to justify new Soviet missiles to the East German population and it has made the work movement in Eastern Europe more difficult (though, they would say, more urgent).

Red banners in Weimar, in Erfurt, shout about the indestructible friendship with the Soviet Union and the Soviet army, rather as an Oxford Street tout will hoarsely advertise the merits of a toy designed to withstand the bombardment of a three-year-old. The Russians are known, often ironically, sometimes with a pitying shrug, as the "friends". There are quite a lot of friends: most western estimates say 380,000 men in East Germany, a large proportion of them in Thuringia. Add some 10,000 main battle tanks and the armoury of long and not-so-longrange missiles and it becomes clear that this friendship, if not indestructible, is at least enduring.

Moreover with an East German "people's army" of 115,000 and an active force of 50,000 border troops, there seems little doubt that this is one of the most densely militarized areas in the world. As befits a friendship sealed in Potsdam rather than heaven, the Russians keep their distance. In their Erfurt barracks they have their own cinema, library and clubroom. When they come to town they are kept on a tight leash.

Free German Youth (FDJ) activists deny there is any tension between the Russians and the East Germans and say too that the new western missiles will cement the relationship. "As soon as the Bundestag made its decisions there were spontaneous meetings in factories to discuss the situation. There is no room for doubt any

But there are doubters still. Many church communities have been expressing their fears about the new Soviet missiles, though they must do so discreetly, for this is dangerous terrain. Speakers at the recent Mecklenburg synod criticized the missiles, and the parish of Babelsberg sent a letter to the party leader, Erich Honecker - printed in the party daily Neues Deutschland saying they were deeply afraid of a deterioration in the situation between the two superpowers" (without pinning the blame solely on the United States).

The swords-into-ploughshares symbol of the East German peace movement, possession of which was once enough to attract detention and questioning, is back, printed on bookmarks and pamphlets.

The difference between the West and East German peace movements. besides the obvious contrasts in size and legality, is that the West is concerned with protesting against its limited sovereignty, the sense of powerlessness that comes when American hardware is distributed throughout the German countryside. The East Germans have lived with limited sovereignty for a long time and they know that a Soviet withdrawal is not feasible, not a realistic goal.

Instead, the movement - nobody knows how many people it embraces, perhaps several hundred in Jena and East Berlin - concentrates on trying to slow down the pace of the militarization of East German society. Priests complain that children have problems at school if they do not take part in para-miliforced as part of their contract to take part in shooting exercises.

The peace activists in Jena, some of whom are now in jail, want more: open discussion of the possibility of a nuclear-free Europe; the honouring of the right of conscripts to serve in construction brigades rather than carry arms; a guarantee that women will not be recruited into the army. The harassment of these activists

But in general Kriegsstimmung leads not to dissident pressure for action against Soviet missiles, but rather for a more sympathetic attitude to Honecker's leadership. This Mr Honecker exploits with some tactical skill. He tells the Central Committee that new Soviet missiles will be stationed at a faster rate to counter the cruise and Pershing, but this is firmly identified as the fault of the West. At the same time he declares that he is open to any new initiative to improve relations with Bonn.

It is the mime of injured innocence, an oddly credible act for his citizens. And somewhere amid all the manoeuvring, buck-passing and propaganda games, the actual cause of the fuss, the stationing of Soviet SS-20 missiles, has been forgotten, buried under the images of nuclear war and nuclear peace, of

But why no artistry on the outside too?

Just over a year ago Michael Heseltine, the minister concerned, announced that all the schemes in the competition for the National Gallery extension on the adjoining bomb site had been rejected, but that one of the three finalists, Ahrends Burton & Koralek (ABK), in association with Trafalgar House, had been invited to meet the trustees to produce a mutually acceptable

At last the new scheme has been unveiled, prior to an application for planning permission and an inevi-table public inquiry.

The original competition, a joint affair which combined architects and property developers, resulted in almost as chaotic a situation as most Victorian competitions, in which notoriously, the winner never got to build his design. As well as ABK, designs by the well-known American architectural firm of Skidmoor Owens and Merrill and the high-tech whizkid Richard Rogers were commended (or would have been had this been an ordinary compe-

It was then learned that the he uses get a design, but Mr Heseltine, in a fit of patriotism – this was not long after the Falklands war – decided on a British firm and chose ABK. The

Richard Rogers design had been damned by the praise of the president of RIBA for the way it said "sod you" to the other buildings in Trafalgar Square; this inaugurated a new phase of architectural criticism. As might be imagined, the designer of the Pompidou Centre in Paris and the new Lloyds Building in the City had draped the outside of his building in brightly coloured pipes, and at the corner by the Gallery he had designed a tower in the form of an oil rig.

ABK, on the other hand, had eschewed all such flashiness and designed a building surprisingly Roman in character, a square block, the inside scooped out in a great crescent, from which you entered the gallery, the elevations strongly symmetrical with Caracalla-like windows and a curved roof pierced with avail lunettes.

The design had a gravitas suitable to its position and although, like all the other designs (because of the brief), did not make any attempt to improve the facade of the National Gallery itself – which has always worseld an unstisfectory backdron. proved an unsatisfactory backdrop to one of London's very few imperial spaces – did at least offer an architecture which could happily take its place beside its neighbours

It has been questioned whether the Gallery needs the extra space, but even if it does, no effort was made to consider any other solution to its problems. The most obvious would be to extend the National Gallery upwards and pay for this by selling the bomb site to the highest bidder. But one of the troubles with competitions is that the brief is

So the architects were landed with the problem of designing a building with mutally incompatible functions, an art gallery above a prestige office block. An office on this site can only be used as a headquarters building, which Trafalger House intends. It was no doubt this almost impossible task that caused all the delays in announcing the new scheme.

But alas it has meant that all the quality of the original design has been lost in the process. Instead of the Caracalla windows we now have a typical framed building of the late 1960s, sheets of glass below for the offices and panels of Bath stone above. This stone contrasts insensi-tively with the Portland stone of some of the plinths in the new buildings and, of course, the buildings to either side of the Trafalgar Square will blow.

Perhaps it is too much to expect today that we might see classical architecture on a public building (though many buildings in the private sector now being built, even in the City, are using classical details) but is it too much to ask that an extension to the most important of English art galleries could at least have some art, either sculpture or murals, on the outside?

And for that matter, why must all the galleries be barren of any architecture, just great bland shells to exhibit art divorced from all human contact and anything that

A great deal more work must be done before this building can become a worthy addition to even the wet architecture of the National Gallery.

Floored by their very own flaw

Mr Giles Radice, Labour spokesman on education, Mr Fred Jarvis of the National Union of Teachers, and Mr John Swallow, president of the National Association of Head Teachers, have pronounced judgment on the Cox-Marks report on Standards in English Schools. Their finding is that the Department of Education and Science has been traduced.

Baroness Cox and Dr John Marks, of the National Council for Educational Standards, had pro-duced a report whose research showed that the examination results of grammar and secondary modern schools together were better than those of comprehensive schools. It immediately encountered bitter hostility from educational writers. Sir Keith Joseph, Education Sec-retary, then asked the DES statisticians to appraise the report. Subsequently, a series of leaks from the DES told the world that the Cox-Marks research had been found, by the department's experts, to be "seriously flawed". Verbaum extracts of parts of the DES critique, selected to convey this message appeared in parts of the press, but Baroness Cox and Dr Marks were in no position to defend their research since the DES would not give them a copy. Eventually, however, the authors managed to get a copy from a journalist less hostile to their point of view. They also received a letter from Sir Keith Joseph refusing any DES funding for their future research, but suggesting a meeting between the authors and

DES statisticians. The meeting took place in the presence of Sir Keith, and the statisticians admitted that an error of their own in appraising the report had been responsible for the doubts about the representativeness of the Cox-Marks sample. They were now reassured that the sample had been representative.

The only significant question remaining was how far class and economic circumstances were material to such research. It was agreed that the Cox-Marks report had taken account of as much evidence of this sort as was available from the DES but that the DES ought to, and would, make more such evidence generally available.

Thus an amicable conclusion was reached, after which Sir Keith published the agreed DES statement welcoming the pioneering work of the NCES, and accepting its statistical validity. Contrary to some reports, he said, the DES did not regard it as "seriously flawed". Where, then, had this accusation come from? Not from the chief statistician. Mr Wakefield, who pointed out that he had never used

The question is of considerable interest now that Mr Radice, writing to The Times (Dec 3) has con-demned the "blatant political pressure applied in an attempt to override the DES's careful assessment of the report" and Mr Jarvis and Mr Swallow in a further letter (Dec 6), have said that Sir Keith should speak up for his staff against its critics given the "constitutional limitation" (no irony is presumably intended)" on their freedom to respond to public criticism."

Having now obtained a copy of the leaked (if less than "careful") DES critique, I am able to explain all, and a wondrous story it is. The critique was in three parts. First, there was the statisticians' report. This, despite its own admitted statistical error, was by no means crudely hostile to the Cox-Marks research, which it recognized as pioneering work serving "a most useful purpose."

Secondly, there was the department's own "commentary" (also six pages) by the schools branch. Though it spoke of "serious criticisms" of data and methodology, it noted the report's "stimulae to public debate" particularly since "exam results are now very much on the agenda in comparing different types of school system. But what matters is the third part, a two-page covering memorandum by Mr N.

Stuart of the School Branch. "Attached is the Department's commentary commissioned by the Secretary of State," he wrote. "It concludes that the research methods were flawed to the extent that the findings must be open to serious question." As for the "clusive prospect" of a final, decisive piece of research to resolve the differencebetween the two sides of the schools system argument, "I am driven towards the conclusion that this is a fundamental political and philosophical divide, with research just one of the instruments of battle."

This was "important in consider-ing where we go next". If the NCES were refused funding. Mr Stuart wrote, the Secretary of State would "upset his political friends." But if he said yes, there would be "uproar in academic circles (which, precisely, I wonder?) where there is no confidence in the NCES's pro-fessional ability to conduct statistically-based research".

There must, he thought, be a temptation to "hold the ring" and for the DES itself to commission an authoritative piece of research work in this area. He then describes, briefly, two possible models for it, adding blandly: "Whatever the model, a good deal of further work would be needed (and I note now that at its present complement my branch does not have the manpower available to take this on) before research bodies were invited to tender for what would be an expensive and lengthy project."

Oh, Sir Humphrey, bow your head for you have met your better! Was there ever a neater way of condemning a piece of research, unheard, behind the closed doors of Whitehall, and of putting its purpose on ice? But it was the leaked polemic of the edited condemnation of which, of course, I do not suggest that Mr Stuart himself was aware) which was the really heavy stuff, denigrating bona fide research which would have been defenceless if Sir

Keith had not intervened. Such is the officialdom to whose rescue Messrs Jarvis, Swallow and Radice gallop with, as their only ammunition, a letter from Mr Wakefield to the NCES authors, and Sir Keith Joseph's letter turning down the NCES funds application, both of which were written before the departmental retraction. They should do their nomework better.

All this has serious educational implications but it is also an example of an increasingly prevalent kind of Whitehall leak (particularly from the "social" departments, which have their own highly politicized positions) designed to frustrate any development repugnant to received departmental

The attempted descrediting of the Cox-Marks report is one of three such incidents from the DES. It has backfired, and the authors have been able to defend themselves, but only by accident. It is, of course, the business of the journalist (with few exceptions) to publish what he can get from any source. But it is not the business of civil servants to indulge in this kind of politics. When a department has something of this sort to say, it should say it openly, provided its Minister agrees.

Certainly if one caught sight of pink-eyed Buck starting to dig Bakerloo Line-sized burrows under one's house it would be bad luck indeed. Buck is dangerous when cornered, and far from the well-behaved, cultured creature with a waistcoat and pocket watch, that Alice meets in Wonderland, he has a hatred of the precious Pommie attitude to rabbits as cuddly bundles of fur who will repay with affection a draughty hutch and occasional mouldy cabbage. He loathes children.

"If threatened by a stranger, Buck would first try to find a way out, to run", said his owner, Mr Arthur Butterfield. "But then, if there was nowhere left to go, he would stand and fight, biting and scratching with his teeth and claws. He is very powerful." In short, Buck is the rabbit equivalent of Moby Dick.

"He was always all right with me though", said Arthur, a former haulage contractor who took to rabbits after his business folded. "You just have to get to know him, but my wife could not get near him. He didn't like anyone he didn't know and I would never let children play with him.

We had to behave badly, because the rules were loaded against us before we ever joined the Community, through a deal between France and West Ger-many in the mid 1960s. France got the Common Agricultural Policy as the price for opening its market to German industrial goods. The policy meant that agricultural products could be sold throughout the Community at a fixed price, protected by a common external tariff and maintained through a common fund which purchased any surplus. By a further twist, the prices of many products were fixed higher than France would have required, so as to ensure that West Germany's relatively inefficient farmers did not lose

She can sit demure and smug, with arms folded, until her partners come up with a proposal she is willing to accept.

> That being so, suggestions that we should withhold our budget contribution or resort to sanctions against our partners are quite unnecessary and betray a misunderstanding of the situation. They would only be in order if our partners resort to breaking the rules in an attempt to ignore our demands. On this issue we can afford a policy of "no first strike".

especially, to the plight of the most innocent victims of the present crisis: the Spanish and Portuguese, who are waiting for the Community to pull itself together sufficiently to give a clear answer to their applications for membership. It is in the context of their joining, as members with a lower than average per capita GNP, that an overall increase in Community expenditure would actually make some sense. The package that includes such an increase must also include terms for their admission. Otherwise there is a real risk that Spanish attitudes to the Community, in particular, will go sour.

Spain, like Britain, has historically been ambivalent about her relationship to the European continent. In the last ten years or so she has made tremendous efforts to affirm her European identity. If now rebuffed, or kept waiting indefinitely on the doorstep, she may have second thoughts. That would have negative implications for her membership of Nato, for the prospects of defusing the Gibraltar issue (and so for Anglo-Spanish bilateral relations), and perhaps even for Spanish democracy. Avoiding it should be a high priority, for Britain and for

NEWS MANAGEMENT IN MOSCOW

The appearance of Soviet leaders at press conferences in Moscow is part of a more sophisticated approach to the Western media; it is not however a step towards more open government. The iob of a foreign correspondent in the USSR is difficult. If he pursues the news in a manner considered normal in other countries, he risks immediate expulsion for espionage. He is obliged to obtain permission from the authorities before making any trip out of the capital. Yet if he confines himself to analysing reports in the official press he may as well operate at home and save his employers the vast expense of maintaining a Moscow correspondent. The Kremlin has long been distributing its own publications, translated into the major languages of the world, in the hope of influencing public opinion outside the Soviet block. Like the foreign broadcasts of Moscow Radio, however, these periodicals are so clearly propagandist in style and content that their impact is minimal. Now the Soviet leaders have discovered that if they are prepared to be photographed and interviewed by foreign correspon-dents, their views are assured more news space and attention in the West than when merely circulated in their own controlled media.

aimed at persuading the public in NATO countries that their government, by proceeding with the deployment of US missiles in Western Europe, were wholly responsible for the Soviet departure from the Geneva talks on intermediate nuclear forces.

Moscow was clearly sending a message to those who wish to disarm the West unilaterally, encouraging them to continue their demonstrations. Mr Georgy Kornienko, a deputy foreign minister, denied claims by Western leaders that Soviet negotiators would soon return to Geneva "as if nothing had happened" and Marshal Ogarkov hinted that the stategic arms talks (START) which end their current round on Thursday are also at risk. He also seized the opportunity to attack the US air raid on Syrian positions in Lebanon, calling it "bandit

Mr Leonid Zamyatin angrily repeated the official line that the Soviet leader, who has not been seen in public since mid-August, had been suffering from a cold, but was now able to deal with the main matters of government.

> While earlier press conferences, such as that held in April by the Foreign Minister and Politburo member Andrei Gromyko, were obviously presenting the views of the top party leadership, both this latest session and the September conference on the Korean airliner gave prominence to the military in the person of Marshal Orgakov. But this does not mean that the military are determining foreign policy in the absence of firm leadership by President Andropov. All three leaders at Monday's press conference are members of the party's Central Committee. Marshal Ogarkov is also First Deputy Defence Minister, the Defence Minister himself, Marshal Dimitri Ustinov, is a full member of the ruling Politburo. There is no evidence to suggest that any major divergence exists in the foreign policy aims of party leadership and military command. Both are firmly united in their hostility towards the West.

Safeguarding the homebuver

From Mr Graham Lee Sir, In all the argument about the House Buyers Bill one fact is, perhaps, being lost sight of. This is that essentially the whole business of who does conveyancing is about consumer protection.

Whatever the rights or wrongs of the so-called "monopoly" of solici-tors in conveyancing matters, the Austin Mitchell Bill is an appalling piece of drafting which, by any objective standard, will substantially and seriously reduce the protection of the consumer - the homebuyer. What the buyer requires is the certainty that the home he is buying will belong to him, with no problems; he is not buying an insurance policy, which is all the Bill provides for

A recent survey undertaken by MORI (whose Bob Worcester has been described by Austin Mitchell as the "best pollster in the business") for The Law Society reveals that 62 per cent of homebuyers consider the most important thing they want their solicitor to do is conduct the work thoroughly, whilst only 4 per cent think giving the cheap quote is most important.

This, together with the fact, already reported by you, that 87 per cent of recent homebuyers are satisfied with their solicitor's service, demonstrates that Austin Mitchell has got it quite wrong.

A licensed conveyancer under this Bill, which provides for no qualifi-cation, training, or test of com-petence at all, is hardly likely to be able to produce the thorough job the homebuyer wants. House buyers beware!

The Severn barrier From Mr C. K. Haswell

Sir, The letters of Mr Richard Cottrell (November 19) and Dr Geoffrey Kellaway (November 25) relating to the crossing of the Severn estuary merit correction in the of the two existing driven context tunnel links.

The first, constructed between 1873 and 1886, was the original Severn tunnel, providing a rail link between England and Wales. It was a great feat of engineering, carried a course of premature death, out in the foreknowledge that it was no easy task. Indeed, it remains seriously injured on British roads arguably Britain's most celebrated during the 1970s were laid end to tunnel, only second to Brunel's famous first crossing beneath the Thames. Today technical advance has made the means of tunnelling more effective.

The second Severn tunnel, which crosses below the present bridge, is the CEGB power-cable link. My firm acted as the consulting engineers responsible for the project and I can assure Dr Kellaway that one of the most comprehensive geotechnical investigations of its kind took place.

An extract from my paper, read to the Institution of Civil Engineers in 1973, stated:

In that the tunnelling works were considered to be a difficult task from the inception of the project it is considered that, in the context of the exploratory data, the correct decisions on choice of parameters were taken. Further, it is considered the methods of attack (construction) employed resulted in completion of the tunnel successfully with due regard to the important aspect of safety.

To say, as does Mr Cottrell, that "The history of true tunnelling in the Severn grounds is not a happy one" is untenable. Further, to place the problems encountered in the construction of the CEGB tunnel in the same category as those met in the earlier tunnel is totally incorrect. A third Severn tunnel is perfectly feasible. Yours faithfully, C. K. HASWELL Charles Haswell and Partners, Consulting Engineers, 99 Great Russell Street, WC1. November 28.

British consulting engineers have recently been credited with invisible earnings at the rate of some £565m per year, an average of £47m per month. That the UK had a net invisible surplus of £160m in October must be due in considerable part to the contribution of consulting engineers.

This is simply nonsense. Stores, like anyone else, have the right to legal protection against theft; but shoplifting cases range from those involving organized gangs of shop-lifters to cases of muddled shoppers, often elderly, who remove goods without a clear intention to steal.

If those in the latter category are to be spared the stigma of a prosecution and court appearance for a crime they have not committed an attempt must be made to distinguish them from deliberate shoplifters.

Even where the theft is deliberate in some cases a police caution - official or informal - may be all that

Sir, It seems to suit some churchmen to resurrect the dichotomy between "personal" and "public" Christianity. In particular there is a disposition to associate "individual" or "personal" faith with a Tory philosophy of individual enterprise and achievement and then conclude that only a radical social religion has true validity.

One result of this is the adoption of political socialism and the attachment of "radical" insights of the faith to give it a quasi-theological content. Thus the dichotomy is perpetuated, not by those whose emphasis is on personal faith, but by those who are left-handed.

Nuclear metaphor

From the Right Reverend Trevor Huddleston, CR

Sir, The Minister of Defence is quoted today (feature, December 2) as saying: "... the seamless robe of deterrence exists." Whatever the force of Mr Heseltine's argument for the use of more and more hideous nuclear weapons in the name of peace, he might at least respect the susceptibilities of Christians in his use of metaphor. For us there is only one "seamless robe" of significance. It was that one taken from the crucified Christ by the soldiers with the words, "Let us not tear it but cast lots for it to see whose it shall

It is hard to think of a more blasphemous comparison than that between the seamless robe of Christ at the moment of his supreme selfgiving for the salvation of mankind and the horror of cruise and Pershing and all the other weapons of our day.

If the minister desires an appropriate metaphor I suggest he uses that phrase from St Mark's gospel: "The abomination of desolation standing where it ought not." †TREVOR HUDDLESTON, Yours faithfully, House of the Resurrection, Mirfield, West Yorkshire.

solitary one is to destroy it". That's a useful text for the critics of your leading article to latth on to.

concerns arose out of personal faith. "You have nothing to do but save souls", he said. That, he believed, was man's fundamental need. This conviction arose out of the sense that his own soul needed saving. It was his personal experience of salvation which came to him on May 24, 1738, at Aldersgate Street which proved to be the motivation of his entire ministry.

The societies he formed were not "oressure groups" for social action, but the means whereby personal faith was nurtured to maturity. If there is one lesson to be learnt from the eighteenth century evangelical revival and social reformation it is that public faith springs from personal faith.

if it was true then, when social conditions called for radical measures, is it not true today? Yours faithfully,

From Mr Ray Hurst Sir, Although Francis Pym (feature, December 1) is justified in referring to the "economically wasteful" and "humanly damaging" effects of unemployment, it is the "socially divisive" aspects of the problem which he emphasised which must be of the greatest concern.

of the greatest concern.

Unemployed young people in particular, especially those experiencing long-term unemployment, react to their despairing situation by becoming apathetic and complacent and allowing themselves to drift into a sense of total hopelessness. This is not generally reflected by spontaneous and aggressive anti-social behaviour on the streets (although it is important not to ignore the rise in the number of burglaries and the relatively large number of those aged under 24 among those whose crime is detected).

Although the new Youth Training
Scheme has been generally welcomed and supported by those involved in assisting unemployed young people, the fact should not be that there are currently over 400,000 unemployed teenagers aged 18/19 years who are not eligible for entry to the scheme. Also, the published unemployment statistics do not divulge the total number of those waiting to enter their first real job. If those in Government special schemes are included, the numbers currently in this category must be about 750,000, at least.

Society still attaches a stigma to long-term unemployment. In the eyes of too many employers the longer a person is unemployed the more unemployable they become. The Government must make strenuous efforts to provide more paid employment for those young people still waiting for their first opportunity of employment.

The recent reluctant decision of the Manpower Services Commission, because of financial constraints, to curtail recruitment to the Community Programme, a much-needed scheme for the long-term unemployed, is to be deplored. The allocation of more resources to schemes of this kind should not be based solely on grounds of com-passion but because it would be investment in sound common sense, considering the alternatives.

Restriction on parole

From Sir David Davenport-Handley Sir, As an admirer of the work of Dr Julian Candy I was sad to see that he had found it necessary to resign from the Parole Board, of which I am a member.

He says in his letter to you of November 22 that his views are shared "in whole or in part by very many of his colleagues". I am not one of them.

I strongly believe that the Home Secretary of the day had the right to change the parole restrictions. He is exercising a statutory discretion and if it is a political decision that also is his right, and indeed duty, reflecting as it does the clear mandate received in June to provide greater protection for the public.
Of course, one would expect all cases to be referred to the board, as in the past, and not, as suggested by Lord Hunt in his letter (November 30) only those selected by the Home Yours faithfully, Rutland.

From Dr W. I. Pumphrey Sir, I would like to thank your many correspondents for their replies to my letter (November 12) on minimum time intervals and for their wide-ranging observation of areas where there may be intervals even smaller than I had envisaged.

I was especially interested in the negative time concept proposed by Mr Christopher Fagg (November 17) since the possible existence of such time intervals had escaped my notice. He is entirely correct, of course. They do exist and I now realize that he has formalized a saying of my mother that "someone had picked her up before she had fallen down", although she was referring not to buses moving slightly faster than the speed of thought but to our local grocer, who invariably wrote to her about the state of her account when she was still debating the size of her next

It seems to me entirely appropriate to call the basic unit of time a "Hume", as proposed by Mr Alpin (November 21) since it is clear that a "Hume" can be negative as well as positive. I only wish I had had a "Hume" by me in my university days, when I invariably had to echo the words of Hobart Brown, "Backward, turn backward, O time in your flight and tell me just one thing I studied last night".

the designer of the experiment, explained that the theory about the response, known as the Barany effect, held that the thermal stimulus created convective currents in the fluid of the inner ear's semicircular canal. These currents were believed to make the body think it was moving in one direction or another, thus causing the ear's balance-controlling vestibular organs to react accordingly. If they did not, doctors took this as a sign that defects in the organs were probably responsible for the bout of dizziness.

Mark Henderson's lighting is the element that most attracts attention to itself during Conso Trobar and stays most vividly in the mind afterwards. With its soft glow picking out the bodies (or sometimes only the faces) of the dancers, its patches of shadow, its continual shifting and changing, it is a typical London Contemporary Dance Theatre lighting plot. Somewhere among all that discreet shifting light there is a ballet trying to get out - but not trying very hard. It has music described puzzlingly as "based on arrangements by Martin Best and realized by Barrington Pheloung". Back for a week in the huge but serviceable barn of the Dominion Theatre, Welsh National Opera provide in their opening production an experince of such chilling power, of such musical and dramatic cogency, that one wonders what on earth London's opera companies are up to with their French Fripperies and star vehicles when there are sill Janacek operas which are not intheir repertoires.

From the House of the Dead, nacek's own adaptation of Dostoyevsky, was left not quite complete when he died; his pupils finished it but also entimentalized it. It has taken time to restore it to its intended And splendid it most strangely is, in spite of its acutely depressing setting and stroy, for Janacek's genius was to point beyond the confines of the unutterably dreary prison camp (in Maria Bjornson's grey, rambling setting, a broken-down structure, hastily strapped together with barbed wire, like an abandoned archeaological Mitchinson lumbers over the stage with authority; Robert Carpenter Turner as the noble dig, to the glimmer of freedon beyond).

Freedom, as the relentless tread of the prisoners passed the closing bars of David Pounney's production emphasises, is hard to see in this

But there is still the possibility of story-telling, of myth, and it is these episodes with which Janacek gives rhythm and meaning to the piece.

In these stories, which become the focus of the nonaction (the real event, Luka's death, is a side event during a story), the WNO singers are superb: Donald Maxwell, towering over the final act as Shishkov, with Ralph Mason's wily Cherevin at his side - the glimpses of innocence in his story are painful because so remote; Nigel Douglas's sharply projected Shapkin, hysterical with laughter at the remembrance of his ears neatly pulled off: Graham Clark's manic, demented Skuratov, incisively sung. As Luka Kuzmich, John

Petrovich is more reserved: we only glimpse his brutal treatment in the bowels of this microcosm of hell.

Alongside the stories are the Easter Day plays, crudely staged on the raise platform which serves Pountney for the assembly of the officers and (his one major gloss on he text) the quasi-Last Supper of the visitors. Superbly lit by Chris Ellis, the act interludes flash their cameos of prison life at us, while some of Janacek's paradocically most colourful orchestral inspirations flash past, too.

High, whining clarinets after Luka's death; passing visions of tenderness in the strings; the brazen march of the officers; the biting wrong-note Strauss waltz: the level of inspiration here is overwhelming, and is fully realizsed under Richard Armstrong's direction. An evening of major importance - and, alone of the operas on this tour, it will be repeated, on Friday.

Brook and the Bouffes du Nord. In the stage version of The Tragedy of Carmen the audience sit with their feet in the sand of the arena while the 15piece orchestra play discreetly in the background; four singers, two actors, no chorus. In the film version, with the assistance of Ingmar Bergman's regular director of photography, the events take place in an atmos-phere of misty intimacy. We sense rather than see the bull ring the bar room, the bandits' lair, while the protagonists fight and make love in close-up.

From the opening shot of a kneeling hooded figure in the middle of a symbolic waste, everything conspires to re-inforce a sence of smouldering inevitability. The original plot has been both pared down and turned inside-out, with some macabre embellishments; the sinewy new score has been

On Tuesday night the first concert in this Olivetti Festival was encouragingly attended and hugely successful. It was unfortunate only that little of the success was Webern's.

Possibly because orchestras so rarely have the opportunity to play his music, and certainly because they have insufficient time to rehearse it properly, performances tend to perpetuate the notion of Webern as some impractical, abstract mathematician of sound, when in fact he was in search of a music as fresh and lovely as the mountain flowers he cherished. Here it was again that the London Symphony Orchestra under Claudio Abbado gave us performances of his Variations and his Musical Offering arrangement that were waiting for a corporate rhythm, a feeling of lines being drawn in zigzags of colour across the ensemble.

Shares of Hawker Siddeley staged their own vertical take off yesterday climbing 16p to. 362p as one broker prepared to make a major upgrading on the company's prospects.

The broker, W Greenwall, hopes to complete a study of the hopes to complete a study of the company shortly, and is confident that investors will be on a winner. It believes Britain's healthier climate bodes well for Hawker. Growing export markets and a heavy investment programme in North America should soon be filtering through to profits.

to profits.

Market analysts are looking for pretax profits of between £120m and £125m for the year against £116.2m last time. However, some brokers are looking for a figure of nearer £133m and this is certain to start another round of upgrading among other market experts. Meanwhile, the rest of the equity market continued to maintain its record breaking run, although this would not have been evident from the turnover level. The FT Index closed at its high for the day 5.4 up at 753.6, helped by a firmer appearance on Wall Street and

MARKET REPORT • by Michael Clark

On the gilt edged market, prices rose by up to 50p supported by Tuesday's better than expected bank lending figures. But on the foreign exchange sterling dropped to its lowest level ever, falling 55 points to $1.4355 points to $1.4355.

It looks as though the worst may be over at Steetley, currently the subject of a bid from Hepworth Ceramic. Yesterday the shares rose 6p to 218p as broker Scrimgeour Kemp Gee con-tinued to recommend the shares, despite halved pretax profits and a cut in the dividend last year. At the halfway stage this year Steetley produced profits of £10.5m and Scrimgeour is looking for a similar performance in the second

Faster world growth and a diminishing debt problem

A perceptible glow of optimism that the world may be over the hump of the debt crisis, apparent since this autumn, has been growing brighter as signs of economic recovery have multiplied.

M Jacques de Larosière, managing director of the International Monetary Fund, yesterday added his voice to the band of hope. He told a French foreign trade symposium that the IMF was now predicting 3.5 per cent growth in the industrial countries next year (compared with 3.25 per cent forecast in September), after 2 per cent this year. It was expected to be accompanied by a 4.5 per cent expansion of world trade.

Each 1 per cent growth in the West over the next three years means $35 billion (£24.2 billion) additional export earnings for the hard-pressed developing countries, equivalent to one-third of their total debt' service payments for 1982, the IMF chief pointed out.

Third World nations have already made substantial efforts to help themselves... They have managed, in the midst of the most severe global recession since the war, to cut their aggregate balance of payments. deficit to about $67 billion this year from $110 billion in 1981. Their debt service payments have come down from 23 per cent to 19 per cent.

A durable world recovery, tough adjustment programmes by debtor countries and the maintenance of credit flows to the developing world could lower the debt service ratio to 14 per cent over the next three years, M de Larosière said.

Also striking an optimistic note, Herr Karl Otto Poehl, president of the German Central Bank, told reporters yesterday that the $3 billion bridging loan from the industrial countries to help the IMF over its cash shortage (to be matched by a similar sum from Saudi Arabia) would be agreed when central bankers meet next week in Basle.

The encouraging picture painted by M de Larosière, which follows the recent analysis of Third World debts by Professor William Cline, of the Washington-based Institute for International Economics, is a less certain prospect than he makes it seem. The growth of protectionist pressures and the huge American budget deficit, now seemingly cast in steel until after next year's presidential election, throws deep shadows on optimism.

According to the IMF managing director, who had some harsh things to say about the US deficit, interest rates in the seven largest economies were more than 5 per cent above inflation, when the difference should be no more than 2 per Herr Helmut Schmidt, former West German Chancellor, went further when he said yesterday that the US deficit was the world's biggest economic problem.

In remarks reminiscent of Mr Edward Heath's call a couple of years ago for a "ring-fence" of capital controls round Europe, Herr Schmidt said European countries might be forced to impose capital controls to stop outflows to the US. Almost as the words came out, the idea was being pooh-poohed by the president of the West German Central Bank.

Slater ghost walks again

The move by Mr Gwyn Ward Thomas, the chairman of Trident Television, to stage a management buyout of three of its companies seems to have acted as an advertisement.

Yesterday, Trident announced it had sold Windsor Safari Park, scenery makers Watts & Corry and a company with rights over Trident films to the private concern Southbrook and City Holdings for £2,26m cash. Two banker's drafts are already earning interest in Trident's bank account.

The cash pays for assets of £1,804,000 and profits before tax for the year to the end of last September of £571,000. It also takes into account corporation tax liabilities of £435,000. The tax element under Mr Ward Thomas's buyout would have been left with Trident.

Controlling Southbrook are Mr Derek Dawson and Mr Alan Joelson. Mr Dawson was a managing director of Hemdale, a company started by Mr John Daley and actor Mr David Hemmings in the late 1960s. Hemdale came to t stock market by a reverse takeover of Purben

Five years later it was bid for by Equity Enterprises, where Mr David Frost was deputy chairman, and the backing force was the former financial giant Slater, Walker, with almost a third of the shares.

But in the mid-1970s Mr Dawson was involved in buying back Hemdale, whose name was changed to Southbrook in January 1982. Mr Joelson was a founder and former managing director of the Pleasurama casino group. He resigned in 1975 to join Mr Dawson.

The success of Southbrook, which is involved in theme parks in Spain and has interests in films, is a setback for Mr Ward Thomas. He returns from abroad today to face the matter of compensation for relinquishing his chairman's seat to Lord Hanson at the annual meeting next February. Under his buyout scheme he would have received £83,000. He has a four-year service agreement with Trident at an annual salary of £100.000.

He is still likely to be chairman when the Monopolies and Mergers Commission finally publishes its report into Pleasurama's £56m takeover bid for Trident.

Patrick Knight reports from Sao Paulo on the world's toughest debt problem

Brazil cannot win probably only start building up the self-help strongly again in March, when the country gets back to work after the Carnival is over. Brazil's debt drama became acute more than a year ago, forcing bankers to spend last Christmas struggling with the first of a series of rescue packages.

Now the International Monetary Fund has finally agreed that the series of aims set for 1984 can be made to stick, which was not true of the three This year, subsidies on foodstuffs, cheap credit for farmers, and subsidies for oil have been eliminated, or shar ply reduced. Almost all incomes have been cut, either through wage rises being set below the inflation rate, or through the mechanism of inflation itself, earlier attempts. As a result, the IMF has released more than $1 billion (£689m) of frozen drawing rights, money which has already been used to pay working to reduce disposable back long overdue bridging loans to the Bank for International Settlements.

Encouraged by the thaw, most of Brazil's 830 creditor incomes, as prices rise ahead of Tight controls on imports, down by more than $2 billion, and a fifth in volume from last year's, have forced industry to make do with higher priced local alternatives, cutting de-highly indexed as Brazil's, such measures initially tend to boost inflation, rather than slow it. And that has happened this year, which is a shock for the IMF.

In addition, despite all the promises, little has been done to It remains ominous that fewer than half of Brazil's creditor banks have agreed to curb state sector spending. Capital spending is being halved over a two-year period.

> But the Government has yet to summon up the courage to cut staff. Last year, an election period, those employed by the public sector grew by at least half a million. And although a few of those appointed in an attempt to prevent the Government party's electoral performance being worse than it was have been sacked, they have been more than replaced by new appointments made where the Opposition has taken control.

Despite civil construction falling by 18 per cent in a year, industrial output tumbling by nearly 10 per cent, and commerce generally being cut by 7 per cent, the tertiary sector, responsible for more than half of gross national product and largely formed by the public

One bright spot is agriculture. Subsidies to farmers, and on food have been replaced by high farm gate prices. This may have contributed to inflation this year, and forced people to spend more on food, but it has stimulated a shift in investment from the stagnant cities to the Weather permitting, next year's harvest should be a record. That will be good for exports and will help to depress inflation and eliminate the need to import food.

Another success has been in curbing the oil bill. Internal production has reached the record 400,000 barrels a day.

81 make an impact on a debt burden which, despite the visible trade surplus being three times last year's, will rise by not less than 10 per cent this year. That is certainly below last year's horrific 14.6 per cent increase, but it is still becoming a heavier burden each year. The key lies in export. The 23 per cent devaluation at the beginning of last year, along with continued mini-devaluations, has kept Brazil's goods competitive in the US, and, to a slightly lesser degree, in Westem Europe.

But this has not compensated sharp falls in stagnant reducing the import bill.

But as all of Brazil's creditors of the rest of the world. markets in virtually the whole

Brazil's optimists hope that world trade will grow by between 8 and 10 per cent next year, permitting the country's exports to grow by 12 per cent as a result. Last year, exports shrank to an all-time low of 6.5 per cent of gnp. They will be slightly more than that this year, but that is mainly because gnp itself has fallen. The impressive trade surplus of more than $6 billion is almost entirely the result of cuts in imports; any export rises are due more to firmer prices, than extra volumes. There have also been allegations that trade figures have been massaged, notably by recording exports almost as soon as firm orders are received, but only recording imports when the goods actually arrive in Brazil, a tactic which can only be used once.

Things could improve next year. Demand for some commodities, notably soya, is strong due to the failure of the US crop while coffee and cocoa look promising. But demand for iron ore continues to shrink despite the '5's recovery. Sugar, once one of Brazil's four leading export carners, remains very weak, due principally to the subsidy on beet given by the

The Government is aiming to push exports up to about 9 per cent of gnp which implies a sustained growth of 10 per cent or more each year.

That depends only partly on Brazil. It depends much more on the developed countries considering that growth is more important for the world, than finally defeating an inflation running now at the sort of levels which would cause a second Carnival in Brazil.

The low value of the cruzeiro enabled Brazil to make some spectacular gains this year, to compensate for declines in Third World market. Steel exports, for example, are running at double what they were last year, and still rising. The US, Japan and China being the main markets.

The first two countries have obsolete steel mills facing prohibitive capital costs for replacement. So Brazil's new mills, built with considerable sacrifice and representing a significant chunk of the debt. are able to compete.

But will this be permitted without provoking the sort of protectionist reaction, which will curb export growth in future, and provoke another financial crisis?

For Brazil to escape finally from the bankers' clutches will take time. Eight to 10 years on a steady course is what optimistic planners in Brasilia think. And that depends on a lot of things going right, and very few going this country was £11.1m.

But of that total £7.2m was 90 per cent of capacity, another favourable indicator, and Pilkington has restored its market share to 55 per cent.

Overseas, however, the pic-ture is brighter. Libbey-Owens-Ford in the US contributed £4.6m, and the South African, Swedish and, oddly enough, Argentine companies did well, But below the line, this imbalance between Britain where it must be admitted the specialist electro-optical, oph-thalmic and cemfil glasses are performing solidily - and overseas generates tax prob-lems. After £25.6m in tax, of which £23.5m was incurred abroad, the attributable net loss was £1.8m.

The result was a retained loss of £10.3m, and a loss per share of 0.8p. Nevertheless, this is a distict advance on last year's retained loss of £15.5m or 3.9p a share, and coupled with a 27 per cent increase in turnover to £578m, supports the maintained 5p net dividend. On the 10p fall in the share price to 238p, the yield is 6.3 per cent.

Crystalate

Mr John Leworthy, chairman of the electronic component Crystalate Holdings, does not like debt. That fact may well determine the group's decision about selling the recently acquired china business Royal Worcester. The £24m battle has left the group with £5m of Worcester debt and £9m of Crystalate loan stock - which in effect becomes a rights issue if a

Not surprisingly. Crystalate easily beat the profit forecast made at the time of the bid battle. Pretax profits are up 34 per cent to £3.2m on a turnover up from £20.7m to £23.8m. The final dividend is raised from 1.54p to 2.85p, making a total pay-out for the year of 3.255p. The shares are back to

London, is enjoying a surge in Peterborough both more than office development at the doubled their floorspace, and expense of the rest of the country, according to a detailed study just published by St Quintin, a leading firm of chartered surveyors. It concludes that if the present trends continue there will be more commercial office space in the outer South-east than in central

The last 10 years have seen a startling change in the situation. activities. accounted for 25.7 per cent of all commercial office floorspace in England, the outer South-east for 14.5 per cent, and all other regions combined 46.1 per cent. But over the next eight years the growth in central London office space was the lowest of these areas while that of the outer South-east was the highest. By 1982, central London's share had fallen to 23.8 per cent, but that of the outer South-east had main industrial company headquarters rose from 41 per cent to 43 per cent while the outer South-east's share doubled from 7 per cent to 15 per cent, and the share of all other regions combined feil from 40 per cent to 31 per cent.

"The outer South-east's gain has not been at the expense of London but rather at the expense of the provincial conurbations and peripheral regions" the study says. The fact that, not withstanding central London's reduced share of office space, its share of major company headquarters had increased leads St Quintin to reject the possibility that the outer South-east's growth is due simply to decentralization, or that central London as an office centre is declining in absolute terms.

The study concentrated on 13 towns providing a mix which includes new towns, traditional locations, and a regional centre Crawley, Harlow, Peter-borough, Redditch, Basing-stoke, Swindon, Brighton, Cheltenham, Oxford, Leatherhead, Newbury, Norwich and Ilford.

The biggest percentage in-crease in office floorspace since 1974 occurred in Redditch, 14 miles south of Birmingham, which nearly trebled floorspace from 103,300 sq ft to 301,300 sq

Scramble for Moray shares

A scramble which developed for 7 per cent of Moray Firth Maltings shares offered at 195p yesterday was hardly surprising.

Just five weeks ago, a takeover bid – believed to have come from Harrisons & Crosfield plantations to commodity group – valued them at 240p. Institutional shareholders, controlling 38 per cent of the group.

Mr Hugo Croft, the managing director who set up the company in 1967, close to both the barley-producing areas and Scottish Highlands distilleries, said: "Having struggled through the dramatic demand downturn in 1980, we saw no reason to let our healthy company go."

The placing capitalizes the company at £12m.

GENERAL BUSINESS UNDERWRITING
The underwiting loss at 30th September 1983 in the United Kingdom fire and accident account, including the Republic of Ireland, was £16.7 million (£16.8 million at 30th September 1982). There are signs of improvement in the property classes following rating increases and other remedial measures in the household account. The generally better property result has, however, been offset by a downturn in private motor due to increased claims frequency. Corrective action is being taken.

Market conditions in the United States remain extremely difficult and the operating ratio was 115.1 compared with 111.4 for the corresponding period of 1982. The underwriting loss was £12.4 million (1982 £9.0 million) of which some £1.0 million was due to hurrigane Alicia.

Welsh and Irish gain a chance of vengeance

The cobwebs were yesterday blown away from the British championship. A new and unexpected chapter was added to the 100-year-old tournament, which will fade into the history books at the end of this season, when England were paired with Northern Ireland and Scotland with Wales in the draw for the qualifying groups of the 1986 World Cup in Mexico.

England and Scotland, who will continue their own domestic argument, agreed to close the historic event and start looking for fixtures against stronger international oppo-sition. The Irish and the Welsh, angered by the decision, will relish the opportunity that FTFA has now given them to prove their worth.

England and Northern Ireland could both go through from group three. Although Romania, one of the eight nations to reach the finals of the current European championships, represent a dangerous threat. Turkey (even though they beat the Irish some six weeks ago) and particularly Finland must be considered among the weakest sides on the GROUP 1

Statistics can be a misleading guide to the future but England's past record against their four opponents presents a powerful reason for optimism. They have played them in a total of 103 internationals, won seven (and six of those to the for the one direct qualifying Irish). In scoring 343 goals, they place in group seven. The

Morley set for Albion

The Villa manager, Tony Barton said yesterday that the two clubs had "more or less agred" on the fee.

Noriey, who cost Villa £200,000 from Buraley four and a half years ago, would be the fourth member of Villa's 1982 European Cup winning team to leave the club this year. Albian will be hoping to complete the signing in time for Morley to play in the home game with Queen's Park Rangers on Saturday.

Aspinwall all went reasonably close, and on the balf-hour Harper blazed only inches too high from the worst foothold on the pitch.

A minute later, following a header by Harper, Aspinwall headed the equalizer, but approaching half-time it was clear that Pollock would need to be replaced as Oxford pressed again; Knight came out as substitute for the second half, and almost immediately Aspinwall put Cambridge ahead with a perfectly flighted, curling shot over Rutledge.

Yet just when it might have been supposed that Cambridge would take advantage of the end with a better attacking foothold, Oxford, withdrawing forces more into midfield, began to make telling counter-attacks against a defence occasionally caught slow, square and slippy. After Marshall had headed off the line, Husselbee put Oxford level as Ed Brooke back-headed on the near post, and only a desperate tackle by Hudson

Sounding a charge for Whitby attack

Tony Lee, the manager of Whitby Town, is in no doubt about the tactics he will use when his side travel to Wigan Athletic on Saturday in the second round of the FA Cup. "We are going to attack", he said. "We know we are the underdogs, but if we were to go and defend hoping to draw or sneak a win, we would lose. We watched Wigan and feel they have weaknesses at the back that we can expoit.'

·Lee's confidence is based on the 46 goals his team have scored this season in 16 matches in the Northern League which they lead, and the 23 they have hit in six FA Cup games. In the last round they recovered from a 2-0 deficit to win 3-2 at Halifax Town, the first victory over a league side in the club's 87 year history. Whitby's attack is led by Phil

Linacre, aged 21, who has scored 12 of his 27 goals this season in FA Cup matches. Earlier in the year, his hopes of a full-time career in football seemed over when he was released by Hartlepool United. Since joining Whitby, however, he has attracted the attention of Internazionale.

As a result, Müller, who plays in midfield for the Milanese side Internazionale, will miss crucial championship matches against Fiorentina, Juventus and Verona, He will be back into the Italian first division on January 8.

The club was considering fining Müller heavily as an additional punishment. Müller punched the Avellino defender Biagini in the face in the final stages of the match, and minutes after he had been sent off, Avellino scored an equalizer. Disqualification from the Italian championship did not prevent Müller from playing in last night's UEFA Cup match against Austria Vienna.

Increasing the losses

The "supporters" leafleted the crowd with their plans for a meeting of Luton season-ticket holders at which "they will be asked to sign a pledge not to renew their tickets this summer. The notice added gloatingly: "with many advertisers and sponsors also threatening to refuse cash aid, the present £9,000 a week loss will be increased sharply."

Obviously, the stories continue, he will get the Arsenal job.

All of which meant that Pleat was in a cautious as well as chastened mood after Saturday's match. "I'm wary of being misquoted on this issue; but I do think that the more people who come here, the greater the depth of feeling they show for the club to remain here. I can't see the sense in staying away. I'd like them to come." He added, somewhat plaintively: "There's always a lot of goals here."

BOXING: BRUNO IS WALTZED TO TOP TEN TUNE

old show business about boxing. but there was a large helping of farce when the 16st Walter Santemore, of New Orleans, standing 6ft 51/2in, met Frank Bruno on Tuesday night.

One moment the American was doing the Riverboat Shuffle and the next he was dancing on tiptoe. He hit Bruno everywhere but on the target, and when in the fourth round the local hero sent him flying with a blow high on the head, it looked more like an exit into the wings than a knockout. I had half expected the big, flabby American to be winched up on wires and disappear like a pantomime fairy into the dome of the Albert Hall

If that was boxing, then I must be Mother Goose!

When one looks at Santemore's experience of two and a half years as chief sparring partner of Gerry Cooney, and his win over Ernie Shavers, his defeat at the hands of John Tate and James Ouick Tillis, and this year a points defeat by Eddie Santemore's performance makes no sense.

Thereafter, the big America either went into a solo dance routine or grabbed hold of Bruno and made him his partner for a slow waltz. It was pathetic after this to see such a big man hit the floor from a punch that most good heavyweights would have taken in their stride.
After the bout, Bruno said

He seemed to have had enough of boxing in Britain: But he believes that people are just waiting for him to be pulled down. He wants to go to America to get away from it all, and box there. His elevation to the top ten of the World Boxing Association list should bring him paying work the other side of the Atlantic, if he does hop on a plane.

Because of the WBA's connexions with South Africa and the sudden appearance of Bruno in their ratings, it would not surprise me if, as an official world contender, he even had The Bruno supporters who an offer from South Africa to world champion's match, with Holmes for the undisputed world title does not come off. could slot neatly into the South African propaganda machine. Then, in the 1981 Martini International, he was "sacked" by his caddie. Infuriated by Brown's inept performance, the caddie stalked off the Wentworth course in midround. He charged his employer with lack of effort and chastized him for his insouciance. Brown did not deny the

In fact, he remained unrepentant. That is, until this year. Last winter, at home in Harpenden, he took stock of his life. His career had yielded one win, the Carrolls Irish Open in 1978, for almost 10 years hard labour as a professional. And it had been hard labour. Few golfers frequent the

"Strangely it helped when Hitachi offered to sponsor me at the start of this year. That suggested that a company actually had faith in me. And I began to work on being more positive, recalling situations with greats like Gary Player. With his never-say-die approach you can rarely go wrong."

His negative approach stemmed from a belief that he needed to protect himself from failure. It was a self-destructive philosophy. At Muirfield in 1980 he entered the last round of the Open sharing second position. Unfortunately, Tom Watson was the man ahead of him - four strokes ahead of him at that.

Brown faced the press and inevitable barrage of questions relating to his prospects of winning. With one sentence he silenced the gathering. "Look, I haven't got a chance", he muttered. "Watson ahead of me. Lee Trevino level

Like a good wine Brown needed the vears to mature. And when the cork was popped on his 1983 campaign it quickly became apparent that at last he was ready. He won the Kenya Open on the safari circuit. Then came success in the Dutch Open and by the end of the European season he was seventh in the official money list, compared with twenty-third in 1982. What mattered even more to Brown was that a £4,000 investment to participate in the US PGA tour school paid off. Last month he won the right to compete on next year's American circuit.

He earned his card first by finishing fifth in a 72-hole regional qualifying event at Bear Creek, Dallas, where only the leading 12 of 120 competitors progressed. The came the 100-hole final qualifier on the demanding Tournament Players' Championship course at Sawgrass in Florida where he comfortably earned his dream ticket. And he insisted: "I played

"That's the difference. It's a more relaxed attitude and a positive approach which has been the key. It didn't allow me to function. In each round there are crunch times, moments of crisis, and in the past when I came face to face with mine it meant disaster."

Mañuel Piñero and Jose Canizares of Spain defend their World Cup title against 31 other two-man teams beginning at the immaculate 7,000-yard Pondok Indah course in Jakarta today.

Ken Brown and Bernard Gallacher will represent Scotland in the absence of Sandy Lyle, who won the individual title in 1980. England, without Nick Faldo, rely on Gordon Brand senior and Brian Waites. Eamonn Darcy and Roman Rafferty represent Ireland and Ian Woosnam and David Vaughan play for Wales.

When he returns from Indonesia next week after representing Scotland in the World Cup, Brown will barely have time to celebrate Christmas and the New Yea at home with his girlfriend, Dawn, before preparing for the American circuit.

"I'm card holder number 145 which means that I should be able to tee up next week on their all-exempt tour." But as a precaution I've written to several sponsors seeking invitations.

"I'm looking forward to the challenge My basic aim is to play the mandatory 15 events and make enough dollars to keep my card. If you like, I'll be following the pattern set by Nick Faldo over the last couple of years. And, if all goes well, then I'll probably only play the bigger events in

What is most refreshing about Brown is that he regards the Ryder Cup as the high spot of his year of individual success. British to be fit for Australians

By Keith Macklin

For the first time ever, a Great Britain touring team will take with them a "fitness consultant". Yesterday at a meeting of the Rugby League Council in Leeds, it was decided that the normal tour management team for the 1984 trip to Australasia will include Rod McKenzie, senior lecturer in physical education at Carnegie College, Leeds. The manager will be Dick Gemmell, the coach Frank Myler and the physiotherapist, Reanie Barritt. An assistant man-ager will be selected next month. A touring party of 30 players, to be selected nearer the time, wil be sponsored by Modern Maintenance Products to the sum of £100,000 during the trip to Anstralia, New Zealand and Papua New Guinea, Zealand and Papus New Guinea, starting in May.

Fears that Bramley would have to wind up mounted yesterday as spain next year. The event will be played throughout the summer with players competing for prized worth admitted they were going ahead with plans to liquidate at a shareholders' meeting in Leeds

We have not had any success with our efforts to save the cinb, said Mr Gale. "We have no latternative but to prepare to liquidate."

Strong support for what has become known as the "Appleyard peace plan" came last night from Reg Kirk, one of Yorkshire Cricket Club's leading members myolved in the attempt to bring about the reinstatement of Geoff Boycott.

It is felt that along with a tenteed village of the sort which is now a successful feature at the Cheltenham National Hunt Festival they will suffice.

The idea of another new permanent stand being built during the next decade has not been thrown out, but for the time being it can only be a pipedream. With racing's overall finances in their present parlous state the likelihood of the newly - structured Aintree Racecourse Company being able to find sufficient funds to be able to underwrite the cost of a worthwhile construction must be remote.

However the door has not been shut on the idea because there is still a faint possibility that a muti-purpose building could be built in harmony with the Merseyside County Council,

The National Trust has an education department, now examining new areas for interpretation through music dance, film and literature, as well as drama. The House of Commons has an education officer, as have some 300 national, local and independent museums and galleries. Ironbridge has set up an Institute of Industrial Archaeology with the University of Birmingham, which also provides external courses. Another recent move was the appointment of a former educational television presenter, Pat Keysell, as a mime artist in residence - possibly the first - at Kendal's Brewery Arts Centre. She is producing seasonal cabarets using young and mature talents gleaned from schools and the wider community.

Although the residency is specialist, is symptomatic of a trend. Museums are setting aside rooms for education, preparing audio-visual displays, and sending out materials to to a wider audience, the demand grows for teachers to bridge the divide, writes schools. For this work they need staff with appropriate backgrounds. Museums usually come under administration of "leisure" departments, and their teachers are expected to serve the whole community. Pressure has also come from educational establishments to make collections accessible. The Horniman Museum education department, run by the chairman of the Group for Education in Museums (GEM). Dr Elizabeth Goodhew, illustrates the problems and possibilities. The three full-time staff are supplemented by adult education tutors and lecturers in special interests one does a Saturday recorder workshop.

Lack of funding has held back expansion in the museum education field, despite heavy demand, but there have been other outside sources of finance. These include friends of galleries, and sponsorship – BP paid for education materials for the Wellcome collection at the Science Museum. Manpower Services Commission programmes have also helped to create many one and two-year appointments.

John Reeve's career serves as a solid example. From Cambridge, with a history degree, he went to Avon and became a history teacher, eventually developing his own CSE courses based on local historical research. That took him to the Castle Museum in York - "a fascinating collection" - valleys on the way to schools with a suit of armour or a Victorian dress in the car". Now he's at a peak in career terms and editor of the Journal of Education in Museums (issue five is due in the spring), published by GEM.

His advice on finding a way into education in museums is aimed mainly at teachers, although anyone from a potter to a naturalist may have marketable skills with some teaching experience. Would-be museum educators should freelancing - lecturing or working on holiday projects or evening classes. Offer particular knowledge about part of a collection. Funds may be available from education authorities or under government schemes, as for inner cities, for particular sessions.

Appropriate skills can be gained at university. Manchester has a course in the fine and decorative arts. At Leicester University the Department of Museum Studies has been expandd. The main course is a year long. The Institute of Education at University of London has made a study of museums, galleries and the school part of its postgraduate work. This year there's a new diploma course focusing on three major international museums in London.

You can find out more about the field from the Museums Association, which advertises posts in its monthly bulletin, monitors developments, publishes a factsheet on careers in museums and a datasheet on educational and children's activities in museums.

GEM produces literature, from the quarterly newsletter to a handlist of museum education services in the British Isles and membership is open

Michel Syrett summarizes the latest changes in social security benefits: the unemployment benefit basic weekly rate has gone up from £25 to £27.05. The additional allowance for a spouse of "housekeeper" has risen from £15.45 to £16.70. The supplementary benefit basic weekly allowance for a single person has increased from £25.70 to £26.80. Savings will now only disqualify claimants if they total £3,000 or more. In addition, the surrender value of an existing life assurance policy of up to £1,500 will not be treated as part of this limit. Any amount above that will be counted towards the main £3,000

The capital limit which applies to ingle payments is raised from £300 to £500. The new limit will allow claimants to qualify for a single payment without having to use up savings when a special need arises. Child benefit rose from £5.85 to £6.50 week. This makes claimants 5p ahead of inflation fulfilling a government promise.

William Boyd bowls a bouncer at three rotten stumps of the English public school system in GOOD AND BAD AT GAMES (Channel 4, 9.30pm). The novelist's malden film script provides director Jack Gold with his hat trick for Ellin on English. with his hat trick for Film on Four. But the way in which three schoolboys humiliate an insecure, younger boarder, is, to borrow Boyd's central metaphor, certainly not cricket.
Leaping nimbly between then (1973) and now, Gold gradually reveals why, 10 years after leaving school a glibbering wreck, the persecuted Cox (Anton Lesser in splendidly snivelling form) still reviles his aggressors enough to pursue a violent vendetta against their leader. Boyd's dialogue is at times strong, though reasonable, and the sadism of the traumatic boot-room bullying scene in the tradition of Tom Brown's Schooldays and Lord of the Flies.

5.00 Countdown. Another quarter-final in the words and numbers

CHOICE The climax is knowingly set on a playing field of England.

 Channel 4 is Intent on keeping viewers out of the kitchen tonight. At the other and of the social scale from William Boyd's boarding school bullies, comes THE SNIFFER'S TALE (Channel 4, 11.20pm). This unsettling instalment in the outspoken series, Our Lives, is worth for the sake of "good TV"? watching not because it is particularly good, but particularly because it is, I think, morally misguided. It is also a rare insight into glue-sniffing, an insidious sub-culture that I hope few of us are ever otherwise likely to encounter. "You just end up on the slab" says Pat, our glue guide, who thus becomes the exception to the rule: He ends up on television. Having told us how he finally icicked his addiction to achesive, Pat and four mates then illustrate the effects of inhaling a tin of Evo-Stik. Back in their old sniffing haunts, they pump fume-filled plasti bags into their faces while the cameras look eagerly on. Socially concerned viewers may be shocked at the sight and disturbed by the implications, if a would-be suicide is determined to jump, should the director strap a camera on his back,

 There is a cavemous qualify about THE PUTNEY DEBATES (Radio 3, 7.30pm) that it shares with Today in Parliament (Radio 4, 11.30pm), which, I imagine, will chee Plers Plowright, who produced this fascinating reconstruction of the historic row between Cromwell and the leaders of the blood the leaders the leaders of his New Model Army during a lull in the English Civil War.

The Rev Ian Paisley, leader of the Democratic Unionist Party, said. "There is a Republican cell working in the university that has got to be rid of". A student alleged not there were a number of Provisional IRA sympathizers within the students' union.

In a statement admitting responsibility for the shooting the Provisional IRA said that it should be a salutory lesson to "loyalists" who supported the forces of law and order and the legal system.

It alleged that Mr Graham "rejoiced" in the killing of Republicans and said that "loyalist" politicans should be warned that those who "made ammunition" for the Army and the police should not escape repercussions.

Mr James Molyneaux Official Unionist MP for An Molyneaux trim South and leader of the party, alleged that there was a determined campaign to eliminate key leading figures in the loyalist" community. His party remained determined to bludgeon the Government and the authorities into providing safe conditions for all the people of the province.

He flew from London to Belfast last night for talks with Mr Prior at Stromont where, he said, he would be emphasizing the need to make sure there was an adequate mechanism for clealing with intelligence re-

Mr Seamus Mallon, deputy leader of the Social Democratic and Labour Party, said that the attack was "naked sectarianism" against the entire com-munity. "The Provisional IRA and Provisional Sinn Fein have shown themselves to be sectarian murder gangs. Nothing more and nothing less."

The dead man was a rising star within the Official Unionist Party who had had a glittering academic career and was widely tipped as a future Westminster MP and potential party leader.

But he had made enemies in both Republican and "loyalist" circles by his strong support for the use of "super grasses" and his opposition to the segregation of prisoners.

The crash occurred ten days after a Boeing 747 of the Colombian airline Avianca crashed on its approach to Barajas, killing 181 passengers and crew. It also bore a striking similarity to the world's worst ever airline disaster which occurred in 1977 on the Spanish island of Tenerife when a US jumbo jet collided head-on with a Dutch jumbo, killing 585 people.

Señor Enrique Baron, the Spanish Transport Minister. and Senor Alfonso Guerra, the Deputy Prime Minister, went immediately to Barajas to investigate the crash. Senor Guerra told a press conference that the Government will "study" equipping Barajas with more security devices. Señor Barón, asked whether Spain's crash record could lead to an international boycott of Spanish airfields, replied that no Spanish airports were on the blacklist of the International Airline Pilot's Association.

"Inquiries must show how the Aviaco plane came to find itself on the take off runway," said: "The hungry sheep look up, and are not fed." Mr Rushford said: "Sir Paul Scoon remained in office throughout the period of Maurice Bishop's Government when human rights were suspended, when there were no elections. When that Government was overthrown, the Governor-General saw fit to call in foreign armies into this independent country. It is inconceivable that they would have come in without prior preparation. There must have been a line-up between the United States, Sir Paul and the Caribbean countries. It was a set-up. The legality of the presence of those forces depends on whether they came at the invitation of a lawful Government. If no invitation was issued their presence would be illegal. I have never been able to discover from the Governor-General what happened or how he gave his invitation. He has remained silent and the circumstances are highly suspect.

"As a parallel matter, Presi-

Mr Rushford said his main achievement had been to push through a constitutional arrangement for a proper civil Government which came into force on November 15. He said he was happy to note that Sir Paul said he was returning to his former function as Governor-General. "I applauded that act. He had terminated his reign as Caesar."

But Mr Rushford said the chosen chairman of the interim administration, Mr Alister McIntyre, a United Nations official, has not taken up the

Crisis of Kinnock word mountain

Mrs Margaret Thatcher, the Labour Party having to pay British Prime Minister, yester- for them in the form of lost day flew to London to grapple with a new crisis, the controversial Kinnock word moun-

Mrs Thatcher made a statement to the House on the failed meeting of European heads of government in Athens. Disguised as a series of questions to her. as under the rules of Commons procedure it was supposed to be. Mr Kinnock then made an immense statement about her statement. Indeed. at one point he was heard to observe: 'No such statement has been forthcoming in this state-

The summit was an "unmitigated failure". She had tried to lay the blame of "everyone but herself." were used to that because she was "the banana skin Prime Minister." She had been quoted as saying that the disagreements would be re-solved by the Brussels meeting in March. What did she think would change between Athens in December and Brussels in March? (Irreverent Tory cry of: "the weather.")

Why no positive pro-osals... Chancellor budgeted for £420m or a 50 per cent increase ... was Chancel-lor being deliberate "or was it sheer stupidity?" On and on he continued.

The background to the word crisis was as follows: basically. Wales produces more words than are needed either for home consumption or for British and European markets. Over the years, most of these surplus words were acquired cheaply by Mr Kinnock. He found an outlet for them on chat shows and at the social functions of the London Welsh rugby union football club. As a result he became immensely well-liked and eventually leader of the Labour Party.

But since then the system has broken down. Mr Kinnock has remorselessly stepped up word production even though there have been clear signs of consumer resistance he became leader.

But Mr Kinnock's economy is not geared to producing anything other than words. The brilliant young fonctionnaires in Mr Kinnock's pri-vate cabinet, such as Mr Robin Cook and Ms Patricia afternoon. Mrs Thatcher cor-Hewitt, have been trying to rected it to "heads of governdevise a scheme whereby Mr Kinnock can continue to had no doubt asked to be kept produce words but without the informed.

votes, boredom and general hatred on the part of the rest of the population. But so far no such scheme has been devised. Yesterday Mr Cook, who is the chief Opposition spokes-man on Europe and is officially recognized as brilliant by virtue of his having a beard, could be seen in consultation with Mr Kinnock on the Opposition front beach shortly before Mrs Thatcher's arrival It was understood that Mr Cook had come up with a lastminute compromise scheme to limit word production by Mr Kinnock or at least keep it under control for the duration of the afternoon.

But within a few paragraphs of Mr Kinnock's remarks to Mrs Thatcher, it was clear that the plan had broken down. It was quite clear that Wales was not prepared to abide by any agreement to limit the word mountain or the notorious sub-clause lake. Just when we all thought Mr Kinnock was about to sit down, he got on to the VAT contributions, having actually started off with the Lebanon.

The Speaker tactfully intervened: "Latitude is usually given to a Leader of the Opposition, but I hope he is coming to the end soon. That seemed to spur Mr Kinnock on to a new burst of production.

In due course, he sank back exhausted. Mrs thatcher briskly denied it all. Other Labour questioners did manage to make some telling points. Their difficulty was that Mrs Thatcher seemed to be just as angry with the foreigners as

At one stage, the Prime Minister made the slip of referring to the Athens meeting as being of heads of state" Mr Gerald Kaufman, the chief Opposition spokesman on home affairs and clearly a student of the British constitution, shouted: "You're not a head of state".
